YOUR CHILDREN.

By Olive Roberts Barton

One of the best ways to teach a little child courage or anything of fact, is to do it with him. If he sees someone he loves very much naturally, a parent, doing some thing he will not only be braver himself about it, but that imitative interest of his will prove stronger than his dislike.

If a little child sits down to his supper at the big table and see the others eating chops, gravy, sweet potatoes and pie, while facing him on his own little plate are toast, spinach, and a coddled egg the chances are he will have to have every bite coaxed into him unless he is exceptionally well trained.

It would be the height of diplomacy, if he must be at the table for each parent to eat a portion of what he eats, or otherwise try to match their food to his.

Killing Fear of Water

A child screams when he gets washed. Instead of his father locking himself in the bathroom when he washes and shaves and brushes his teeth, his little son might be allowed in to see. And the lesson put over something like them, "Daddy has to be clean. He has to have his teeth brushed, and his ears washed and his hair brushed because if he didn't people would say, 'Oh, what a dirty man! We don't like clean people.' We only like clean people." Daddy has a lot of friends because he is so nice and clean.

A child is afraid of water. Well, of course that is a story by itself and the best cure is to put him in an empty tub with no water at first and give him a sponge bath. The next day have an inch of water in the tub first and increased daily so slowly that the child won't notice it.

Association of Ideas

But sometimes even that fails. Then it is not beyond all propriety to have him lifted into the tub when his father is in the water or his mother, or someone else in the family he loves. Love is the key to everything.

Children can be cured of certain phobias this way, such as fear of the dark. Again the bathtub tactics may be used, such as closing the door of his bedroom a little more each night until he is in darkness. But this sense of

THE WORLD OF WOMEN

"HOT" SWEETS.

Some Dainty Recipes.

There are occasions on which things would be greatly simplified or the housewife if she could have the pudding cold. Yet she knows that many people—certainly most men—have a decided preference for hot sweets at lunch or dinner when the weather is as "intry" as it is now. A solution of the problem is this: let ginger or peppermint be one of the ingredients, and your cold sweet will not have that bleak chilliness that characterises the usual cream or jelly.

Ginger Trifle

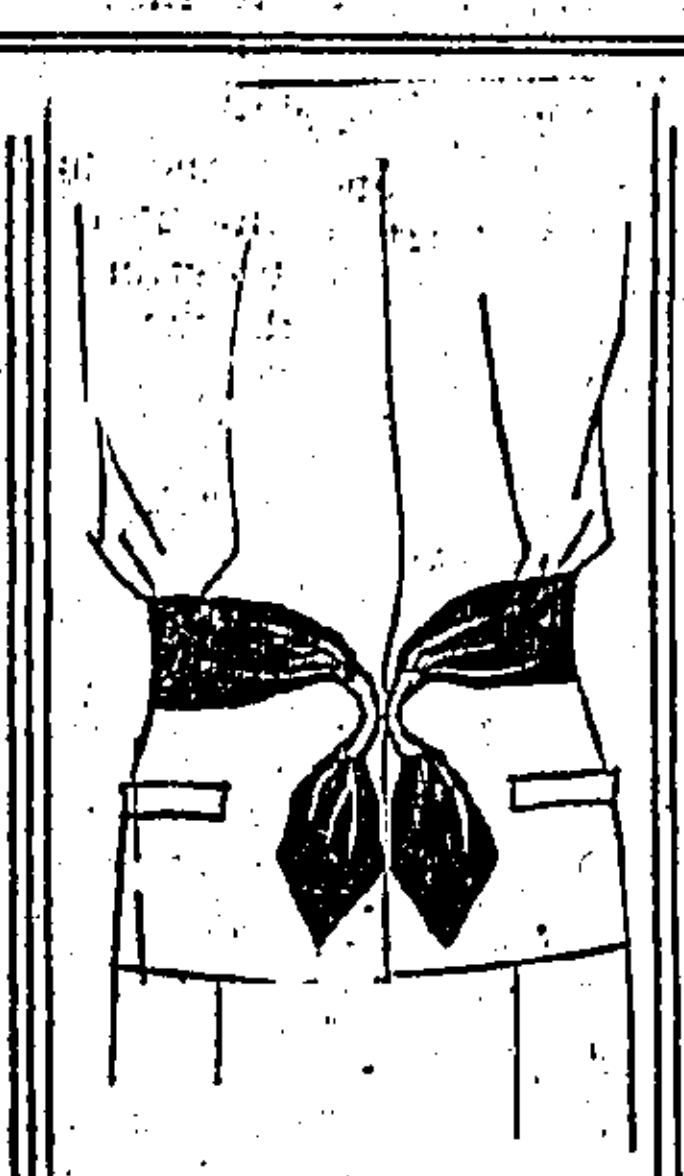

Mix a tablespoonful of some good custard powder with two tablespoonfuls milk (taken from a measured pint) to a smooth paste. Fill up the remainder of the milk and pour over the custard, stirring as you pour. Return to the saucepan, add sugar to taste, and simmer for three minutes. Leave the custard to cool, but stir it occasionally to prevent a skin from forming on the top. Meanwhile cut 3 oz. preserved ginger and 2 oz. pineapple into small pieces, cut 6 sponge cakes in two, and spread with apple or rhubarb ginger. Place the cake in a glass dish and pour over enough syrup from the pineapple tin to thoroughly soak. Sprinkle the ginger and pineapple over the sponge cakes, then pour the custard over all. Decorate with chopped ginger or pistachios, or, if expense need not be considered, with whipped cream.

Ginger Cream

Put a breakfastcupful milk in a saucepan and bring to the boil. Beat up three eggs, add to them 1 oz. sugar, and pour over them the milk, just off boiling point. Return to the pan and stir over a very gentle heat till the custard thickens, then pour into a bowl and leave to cool. Meanwhile cut 1 oz. preserved ginger into very small pieces and whip up a teaspoonful thick cream or evaporated milk. Dissolve ½ oz. gelatine in a tablespoonful boiling water. When the custard is quite cool, stir in the ginger and ¼ teaspoonful ginger syrup, then the gelatine liquid. Pour this mixture into the cream, mix well, turn into a wetted mould, and leave to set.

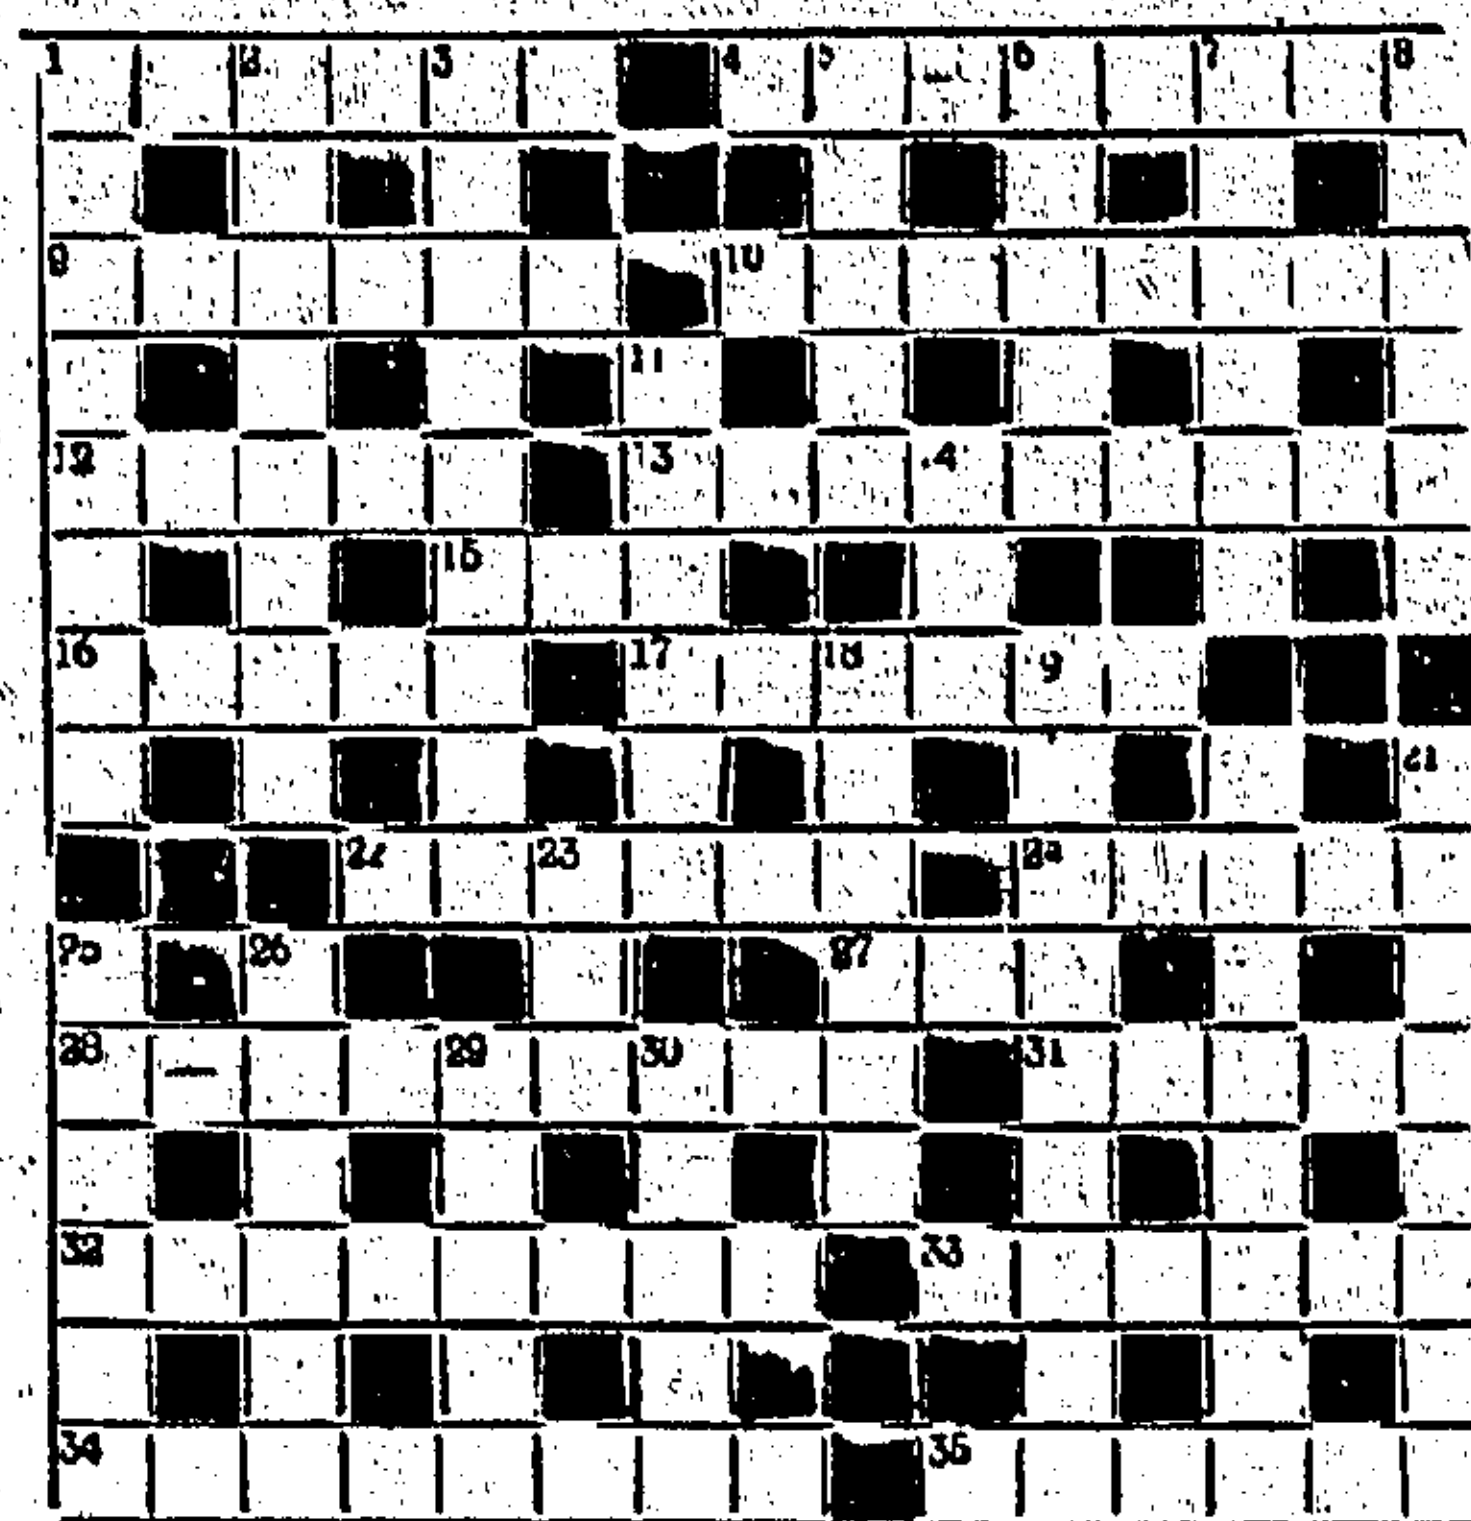

Creme de Menthe Jelly

Dissolve a pint packet of green sage jelly in three teacupfuls cooling water, and add a few drops essence of peppermint. Leave till almost on the point of setting, then stir in two bananas, thinly sliced, and pour into a wetted mould.

SPOTLIGHT

CHAPTER XXXIX

The girl in the gold chair turned toward the door of the dressing room unexpectantly. She was wearing a beige suit trimmed with huge rings of fur at the shoulders. On her head was a becoming little hat of the same colour. Her shoes, gloves and hand bag were of identical hue.

As she looked at Sheila she smiled in recognition. Sheila returned the smile hesitantly. Should she speak to this girl who looked so familiar? Who was she? Sheila knew she had seen her and talked with her some where. But where? Who could she be?

Nodding slightly, still smiling, Sheila walked to the far end of the room where Henri, resplendent in striped trousers, morning coat and gardenia, was whisking about, rubbing his hands together and beaming. He was a vastly different Henri now than when Sheila had met him an hour earlier. She smiled at the thought. She herself, changing from her own inexpensive frock to this costly model, appeared to be a different person, too.

As she passed Henri she glanced at him and he bowed just as he would have bowed to a valued customer. She was amused but took her cue from that. She was to walk about, to sit down, inquire about prices and fabrics and appear to be one of the shoppers. Without conceit Sheila knew that no one in the room was better dressed than herself. Henri had seen to that. He had selected a costume for her that was exactly right to bring out her excellent coloring, the perfection of her figure.

She walked easily and gracefully. That was due to her years of training as a dancer. Sheila carried herself beautifully erect. She moved about the room, then sank into a chair. Henri nodded slightly in approval.

Presently he came toward her. "You're doing well," he approved. "Two women have asked me who you are already."

"Does that help?" asked Sheila. Henri raised his eyes. "Help? They will say if I can make you look so beautiful I can do the same for them. They know the models are hired for their looks and ability to wear clothes. They think you are a client like themselves. Yes, my dear, it helps."

"Shall I talk to anyone?" asked Sheila as Henri prepared to move away.

"Of course. If anyone asks questions you can say Henri made your frock so long as you do it without seeming to introduce the subject. That's the idea. You're doing fine."

He moved away and as he did so the girl in beige approached. "You don't remember me, do you?" She said. "Mind if I sit down?" She opened her purse and drew out a jeweled cigarette case. "Will you join me?" she asked. As Sheila shook her head the other girl laughed easily. "You haven't been here before? Henri doesn't mind so long as you don't burn holes in his mauve carpet. Of course I know you're Sheila Shayne but you don't know me, do you?"

"I'm afraid I don't. You see, I meet so many people—" "Oh, of course. Well, I didn't expect you would. I'm Dorothy Trevor. Dick Stanley's cousin. Trevor Lane's cousin, too. Oh—I'll bet Trevor got you this job, didn't he?"

"You know I'm working here?" Sheila asked.

Dorothy laughed. "Of course. You're much too good looking to be doing anything else. I didn't think you bought your clothes here because I knew who you were." She colored and went on quickly. "I mean actresses don't shop here as a rule. Don't misunderstand me! Henri is too expensive for anyone who knows the value of money."

She lighted the cigarette and regarded Sheila. "I hope I don't seem terribly rude but I'm really interested in you. Ever since I saw you dance that night at Trevor's—"

"As a matter of fact I sang," Sheila said quietly. She recognized the girl now. She was one of the cousins from boarding school for whom Lane had given the party.

"Indeed you did!" the girl replied without embarrassment. "But you danced with Dick afterward. And I saw you several times dancing at the Club Volens last summer. I think you're wonderful!"

Sheila could not help liking this girl. The admiration in her eyes and tone were not feigned. She could not have been more than 18 in spite of her veneer of sophistication.

"I can't be very good or I'd have a job now," Sheila replied modestly.

The other girl's eyes widened. "But this is a job, isn't it? I'd love to wear all these pretty frocks and walk around and listen to Henri rave! I'll bet he can rave, too!"

"Oh, he's all right." "Well, I suppose he's no worse than the stage managers," Dorothy interposed comfortably. "I hear they say the most terrible things and work you until you're ready to drop."

"We manage to survive," Sheila answered in amusement.

The other nodded. "I really do wish I had a job but Trevor says nowadays with so many people needing work it would be a crime to take a job just for fun."

"What does Dick say?" Sheila asked idly.

"Dick? He can't say much. He's so busy he doesn't know what's going on any more. He did say, though, it would be a crime or anyone to let me have a job! Dick doesn't seem to think I'm very useful. You couldn't get me in here, couldn't you? I'd love it!"

They were interrupted by a boy with a message for Miss Trevor. "Mr. Stanley would like to speak to you on the telephone," the boy told her.

Dorothy turned toward Sheila. "It's Dick," she said. "I was to meet him for lunch!" Impulsively she put a hand on Sheila's arm. "Listen, you'll have to eat somewhere. Why don't you join us? I'll send word to Dick to pick us up here. He'll love it. Henri'll let you go, won't he? I'll ask him myself!"

"Oh, I couldn't—" Sheila began but the other interrupted.

"Of course you can. Please!" "Well—if it's all right."

Dorothy rose. "Then that's settled," she said. "I'll talk to Dick right now and tell him." She sped in the direction of the telephone.

Sheila, left alone, thought that the reason this girl was so cordial was because of the glamour associated with stage life. That was why Dorothy Trevor had invited her to lunch. She would enjoy being seen with a girl who had been the featured dancer in stage productions, an entertainer in one of the best night clubs. It would be something to tell her friends later. Hundreds of other people seemed to feel the same way.

Sheila reflected that once she had talked about this matter with a well known star.

"Don't let it bother you," the older woman had said. "It's simply the way things are. After all, in the stage we try to bring glamour into the lives of the members of our audience. They live through the roles we play and they see us in those parts—not as human beings like themselves."

That was it. An actress was supposed to be "different." That was why Jerry had nursed her so cruelly. He didn't think anyone would expect him to be sincere with a girl on the stage as with other girls. That was why Dorothy was excited by the prospect of going to lunch with her.

Well, she would lunch with Dorothy and Dick. Suddenly it occurred to Sheila that, of all the men and women whom she knew, Dick Stanley did care for her for herself alone. Cared for her? More than that, Dick loved her.

Why couldn't she care for Dick as she did for Jerry? Sheila thought mournfully that everything in the world seemed sadly mixed up.

NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE

YESTERDAY'S MARKET WEAK

According to Messrs. Swan, Culbertson and Fritz, the New York market was weak yesterday. Business done: 640,000 shares. The Wall Street Journal reports: Stocks went up when wheat rose, due to inclement weather reports, and sagged when wheat eased owing to profit-taking. There was not much change in the entire list at the close, traders continuing aloof. German Bonds broke sharply. The National Raw Silk Exchange granted members' petition to make Good Friday, the 14th April, a holiday, but refused to close on the 15th.

THE NAZIS AND THE JEWS

Whilst it is now made clear that it is the Nazi Party, and not the Hitler Government, which has proclaimed a universal boycott of Jews throughout Germany, the situation is, none the less, far from reassuring. Indeed, as Herr Hitler is the head both of the Government and the Nazis, the impression is naturally created that the boycott has official sanction, the more so as Hitler himself has long been known for his anti-Jewish outlook. The only circumstance which can dispel this belief will be for the Government not only to disown association with the movement, but to take energetic steps to see that it is suppressed. It was less than a week ago that Captain Goering, the Nazi Speaker, assured the foreign press that the Government had no intention of discriminating against Jews or of interfering with their personal liberties, whilst Herr Hitler himself has promised effective justice to all religions and races. Yet we now have a situation in which the Nazi Party is to put into effect a rigorous anti-Jewish campaign affecting schools, the legal and medical professions and businesses generally. Even newspapers are to be compelled to join in the movement, those which do not do so being banned from German houses, while no German businesses will be permitted to advertise therein. If this is freedom and justice, the terms badly need revising. Whatever the grounds for complaint against the Jews, there can be no possible justification for the employment of such methods. The root of the trouble would appear to lie in Nazi intolerance. The Nazis have no use for any but out-and-out Nazis; all other schools of thought are practically grouped together as enemies of the State. Such a complex is surely sadly out of joint with modern conceptions. It is charged against the Jews, amongst other things, that they are Marxists. Some may be, but it is surely a straining of the facts to class all Jews as of one political persuasion. Common-sense rejects any such contention. Thus to classify the Jews and to subject them to universal persecution is only likely to heighten racial prejudices and possibly lead to excesses of the gravest kind. If this is the Nazi conception of government, little more remains to be said. But no faction can hope to rule a nation on such lines. The day is long past when Jews were regarded as social pariahs. By a wonderful evolution and a steady triumph over disabilities and oppression, they have produced a host of men of distinction and power in all walks of life, especially financial and political. Any plan of ostracism is bound to arouse world antagonism and can never hope to succeed. The world today wants broad-mindedness and tolerance. A vitiated sense of ultra-nationalism can only lead to world disaster. That is why, on large and general grounds, the Nazi campaign will assuredly meet with widespread disapproval.

Shipping Prospects

There seems to be good ground for the air of cautious optimism adopted by Mr. J. P. Warren at the annual meeting of the Kowloon Dock Company with regard to the future of the shipping industry. During the last three months there has been a reduction in laid-up British tonnage of 325,000 tons gross. This is about 10 per cent. of the total of idle tonnage three months ago, or 15 per cent. of the idle tonnage if we exclude vessels more than twenty years old. He would be an optimist who considered that much of the twenty-year-old tonnage will ever go to sea again in competition with modern vessels which can operate at costs ranging from 50 per cent. to 75 per cent. of those of these old ships. We may therefore deduce the notable fact that all the reasonably economic tonnage now idle will be absorbed within about eighteen months at the present rate of progress. And it cannot be objected that the last three months have seen a very notable increase in world trade. It has been quite moderate, and the rate of increase is certainly unlikely to be any lower during the next year. This examination leads to the conclusion that a distinct revival in shipbuilding, more particularly cargo shipbuilding, is much nearer than is generally imagined. It is frequently forgotten that scarcely three years ago most of the world tonnage was fully occupied and that the figure for idle tonnage was negligible. Even a 10 per cent. improvement in world trade would set nearly all the idle ships moving, and it is surprising how rapidly tonnage could be absorbed. And once tonnage begins to move again there should be a boom, if only of temporary duration, in the ship-repairing yards.

Culture on a Peg

An amusing article in a recent issue of the Bookman pokes good-humoured fun at those who take their culture for "an airing" in the circles they frequent. Pushkin, Russian poet, is the peg on which Mr. Winthrop Parkhurst hangs his homily. At a parlour gathering some highly cultured person, in reverential tones, utters the poet's name. "Ah, yes," his hearers exclaim, knowingly, "Pushkin." Then silence. All—including the cultured one—are equally afraid of being asked to quote the poet, not a line of whose poetry they have ever read. Mr. Parkhurst's gentle satire finds even larger scope when it comes to pronunciation. What suspicion is directed at the unfortunate individual who accents the word "irreparable" on the third instead of on the second syllable! Really, no self-respecting scion of the intelligent class can be expected to invite such an one to dinner. Max Beerbohm, in one of his inimitable pen portraits, describes the peculiar, not to say superior, sense of satisfaction the average Englishman derives from the knowledge that he has at his command some colloquial French and a not too comic accent. Until, on one inauspicious day, he hears another Englishman who possesses still more colloquial French with an accent much less comic. Such encounter spells his Waterloo. Philosophy holds no panacea to cheer his despairing mood. Disillusion haunts his ever more halting essays at talking French. Sometimes it even breaks him of the habit. One pet Pushkin is taken less often for an airing.

HOW I READ MYSELF
TO SLEEPBy
ROBERT LYND

A Correspondent has written for my opinion on the best books for reading in bed.

His own choice of bedside books, he declares, is as follows: 1. Montaigne's Essays; 2. V. H. Hudson's Rural Rides; or White's Selborne; 3. a current book.

It would be difficult to make a better selection if one must make a selection at all. For my own part, however, I confess I have no special bedside favourite among books. I go on reading in bed what I was previously reading in a chair, whether it is Wordsworth or Wodehouse.

THE NARCOTIC
SLEUTH

Or, if I make a change, it is usually in favour of a detective story. I find that there is nothing like a really exciting story for sending one to sleep. There is a common theory that the best books to read in bed are those that will soothe one into somnolence. My own experience has taught me otherwise. I sleep most easily when I am reading a book that makes me long to keep awake in order to find out what happened, and when through sheer weariness I cannot keep even one eye open.

The usefulness of detective stories for reading in bed may, I think be explained easily enough. In reading a detective story one is, I imagine, making use of only about one-tenth of one's brain. Even if this one-tenth is enormously excited, the other nine-tenths gradually relax into a gentle drowsiness against which, after a time, the one-tenth struggles in vain.

Take, for example, a recently published sensational novel, which begins:

Murder had been the fixed purpose for two weeks of Eyllife Trent Van Maarden, the scion of one of the oldest Dutch families of New York, last descendant of the name of Jan Van Maarden, friend of the great Peter Stuyvesant.

At first sight that may not appear to be a sentence likely to induce the innocence of sleep. It contains elements more suggestive of nightmare horrors. The fact remains, however, that at the back of one's mind one does not believe sufficiently in Eyllife Trent Van Maarden to care whether he commits murder or not. He does not, like Raskolnikov, in "Crime and Punishment" become one of our own flesh-and-blood neighbours, disturbing the depths of our terrors and sympathies. If Eyllife chooses to commit murder we feel that it will only be a make-believe murder by a puppet. Nearly all the most enjoyable detective stories—whether Conan Doyle's or Edgar Wallace's—are stories about puppets and make-believe. Even while we are being harrowed, we know in our hearts that there is no need to worry. Though the heroine is imprisoned in a cellar, gagged and bound, with the water slowly rising to her chin and a tarantula about to drop on her from the ceiling, we realise that there is nothing in the situation to prevent an honest man from enjoying a good night's sleep.

THE PERFECT
SCOUNDREL

Much and often as I enjoy reading detective stories in bed however, I should not care to be doomed to sleep for the rest of my life

in a room that contained nothing but the latest sensational fiction. I should in time get tired of Myra with the red hair and the green eyes, and of the wicked Sir Charles, and of the blackmailer with the gun in the sports car; and in a mood of reaction would long for Hooker's "Ecclesiastical Polity" or Blenkinsop's "Economic Causes of the Peloponnesian War"—for any book, indeed, that did not happen to be there.

In bed, one likes to have within reach one or two books that one knows so well that one can dip into them almost anywhere, sure of enjoyment.

I do not know whether Dickens would be a good author to read in bed if one had never read him before. Probably he would keep one awake all night. But what an excellent book "Our Mutual Friend" is to go back to between getting into bed and falling asleep. Let that arch-soundrel Silas Wegg, open his lips to speak and at once all seems for the best in the best of all possible worlds.

THE WEIGHT OF SHAKESPEARE

All the books that people praise as bedside books are, like "Our Mutual Friend," good dipping books. Boswell's "Johnson" and "Tour to the Hebrides" are probably the best books of the kind in the English language. Lamb's letters and essays are almost as good. And, besides the books named by my correspondent, Walpole's letters, Pepys, Cobbett's "Advice to Young Men," Thoreau's "Walden," "Religio Medici," "Pride and Prejudice," and Mr. Norman Aul's "Elizabethan Lyrics" might be included in the list.

Shakespeare is one of the best authors to read in bed, but he wrote an inconveniently large number of plays, and a one-volume edition is at once too bulky and printed in too small type to make a perfect book for holding under a bedside lamp.

The Oxford Dictionary, again, would be an ideal book to read in bed, if it were possible to read so large a book in bed. Books for reading in bed, however, have to be judged not merely by their contents but by their size, weight and type. The fact that Marcus Aurelius has for a long time been a favourite bed-book is said to be largely due to the size, weight and type of the popular editions of his work.

AND WHAT TO AVOID

I am not sure, however, whether reading in bed is a practice to be commended. Most of us were warned against it as children, and if you took a plebsite of the community to-day you would probably find that there are thousands of good citizens who prefer to put themselves to sleep by counting imaginary sheep or, like a man I know, by counting the people with whom, during a long life, he has quarrelled.

If people must read in bed, however, and if I am asked to express an opinion on the best books for reading in bed, I must give my vote either for books that can be read over and over again or for books that no same man would wish to read a second time.

The book to avoid reading in bed is the fairly well-written serious book. This awakens the spirit of criticism—and the reader.

"Here you are, madam, a perfect match for your costume—and would you care to see our new spring line?"

The Very Idea!

PLEASE DO NOT CHIT

By Eddie "I.O.U." Kelly.

MONEY!

What, we have often wondered, was it like?

We have often heard of the stuff. Sometimes shroffs have even asked us for some.

And we've always known that people who sit behind large cages in banks, with heaps of brains protruding from large bald heads like an ostrich egg, only pinker, have most of it. But none of them have ever given us a free sample.

So we decided yesterday to find out what all this gold trouble in the world was about.

First of all, we discovered, gold is useless to-day because you can't get it, or wear it, or light a fire with it.

So useless is gold that if the world is ever to go straight again we must go back to the old system of barter.

Pete and us tried the scheme last Christmas. We asked Pete what he'd like for a Christmas present.

"Well, if it's all the same to you, Eddie, ole pal ole pal, ole pal, I'd rather have the money," he said.

So we gave him a ten buck note. He asked us what we'd like for a present.

"If it's all the same to you, Pete, me boy, we'd prefer the money, too," we replied.

So he gave us back our ten dollar note.

Of course, this barter business is all very well in theory, but it doesn't always work.

Supposing you keep a butcher's shop. What with spring coming on, and the birds twittering in the trees, and the G. F. looking askance at the soup stains on your vest, you naturally feel like a new suit.

So you pop along to Pete, who is a tailor and you say: "Look here, Pete, you make me a nice new suit, with an extra pair of pants thrown in, and I'll let you have half a dozen Sunday joints and some gilets."

And Pete says: "That's Oke by me, Hec, (or Charlie, as the case may be)," and presently around comes the suit.

About a month later, Pete rings you up, and complains that the last three joints have gone a little so-so, only more so, owing to the weather.

And then you say, "I'm sorry to hear that, Pete, but as your suit has started bagging at the knees, we'll call it quits."

On the other hand, should you happen to be an undertaker instead of a butcher, you offer him a nice, slap-up funeral, with feathers and tomb-stone and he says, "But I never felt better in my life! What could I do with a funeral?"

So you settle matters by giving him a chip for one posh funeral, to be supplied on demand.

Now, chits written on perishable paper have a way of wearing out. Not that any we've signed have, but it can happen.

So in order that there shall be no dithering or dirty work, you have this chit printed on something more permanent than paper, such as copper, or gold, or silver.

And there you are. That's money.

A TRAGEDY OF LAUGHTER.

In the course of a long experience covering some nineteen summers (said he, blushing like a pillar-box) I have noticed (and you'd better take a long breath here, because this is going to be a Dickens of a sentence), I have noticed that owing largely to lack of initiative, foresight, enterprise, eagerness, inventiveness, exertion, imagination, authority, unanimity, strategy, assiduity, capability, and a few other virtues that I haven't room for, the modern party is too often a full-fed flop; with all the guests over-fed and all the couches overloaded, the best chairs full of obese ladies, and old fogies making agricultural noises in the next room because they work so hard at meals that they're tired out.

Well, we must alter all that. We must do something to get a spot of pep into the doings, liven things up. (Loud laughter, in which two other people joined.)

This stopped him and what he was going to say for the benefit of our Bright Young Things and their cousins, the Not Quite-Bright Young Things, was irrevocably lost to his world.

A BETTER WORLD.

When we pass on to our reward, we will do so with the knowledge that we have left this world a better, purer, and nobler place than we found it.

When we think of all the tempting unlikable girls we have met in Hongkong, of the gallons of beer to entice drinkers, of the opportunities for gambling and dissipation—in short, of all the wickedness that is in our Colony—then we find it pleasing to reflect that we have done our damndest to remove most of the temptations.

INDIA REFORM SCHEME

COMMONS ACCEPT PROPOSAL

WINSTON OFF AGAIN

London, Mar. 29.—The House of Commons agreed to the Government's motion to appoint a Joint Select Committee of the Houses of Lords and Commons to examine the Government's proposals to reform the Government of India, by 449 votes to 43.

A Labour Opposition amendment, demanding, inter alia, Dominion Status for India, was rejected by 475 votes to 42.

The chief feature of to-night's session of the Indian debate in the Commons was a vigorous speech in which Mr. Winston Churchill assailed the Government's reform proposals.

Lord Winterbottom followed with a severe criticism of Mr. Churchill's attitude.—Reuter and British Wireless.

DISASTROUS FIRE AT YAUMATI

THREE BUILDINGS INVOLVED

Yaumati was the scene, early this morning, of a disastrous fire which broke out in a Chinese restaurant occupying three buildings, Nos. 320-324, Shanghai Street.

The outbreak was sudden and assumed large dimensions within a few minutes. No-one appears to have noticed it until all the three buildings were well alight.

The outbreak was one of those roused by shouts. He quickly got into the street, from where he could see, even at that early stage, all the upper floors of the four-storyed buildings already in flames.

A district call brought all available fire appliances on the mainland to a difficult task. All the upper floors, which included the first, second, and third floors of Nos. 322, 323, and 324, were burnt out by the time control was secured.

The ground floors were left comparatively untouched. At the moment it is not known if any casualties occurred. Details regarding insurance that may have been carried by the Ping Heung, the restaurant affected, are also unavailable.

TRIAD SOCIETY REVENGE

MAN PUSHED INTO THE SEA

Because he would not join their club, Chan Cho-tak, a sampan man at Aberdeen village, was treated by three Triad Society men in summary fashion last night, when he was brutally assaulted in Main Street, and finally pushed over the sea-wall.

The affair is likely to have a grave complication, as, in falling, the victim landed on rocks exposed by a low tide, and received injuries which included a fractured skull. Cheung Shing-lee, alleged to have been implicated in the case, is in police custody, while the arrest of the two other men, whose names and description have been furnished, is being sought.

WIFE COMMITS SUICIDE

VILLAGER ENDS HER LIFE

From Taiipo the death of a woman, wife of a villager living at Nam Hang, by suicide, is reported. The woman was found hanging from a beam in the sitting room when her husband returned from work at 8 o'clock the night before last.

The police were informed, that the woman had previously left her husband, but had recently returned, since when her actions had been decidedly peculiar, and quarrels with neighbours are said to have been frequent.

INDIAN LADY'S DEATH

MRS. S. C. ISMAIL PASSES

The many friends of Mrs. S. C. Ismail will regret to learn of her death, which took place at the Young Woo Nursing Home, Happy Valley, last night after a protracted illness of some ten years, death being due to endocarditis and cardiac failure.

Although the deceased lady had been in indifferent health for the past ten years she had been somewhat better until last night when she took a turn for the worse and was taken to the Young Woo Nursing Home, where she died shortly afterwards.

The mother of Messrs. A. K. Ismail, of the American Express Company, and Farid Ismail, of the Naval Yard, the late Mrs. Ismail was 61 years of age and was well known among the local Indian community.

The funeral will take place this evening at 5.30 p.m. at the Mohammedan Cemetery.

Struck by a sack of rice being unloaded from the s.s. Hydra II yesterday, a cargo coolie was taken to the Kowloon Hospital.

DAY BY DAY NEWS IN BRIEF

IT IS THE INTEREST OF THE COMMERCIAL WORLD THAT WEALTH SHOULD BE FOUND EVERYWHERE.—Burke.

"The Problem of Education in Hongkong" formed the subject of a most interesting presidential address given by Rev. Fr. C. Byrne before a meeting of the University Education Society in the University Assembly Room last night.

Driving a car, No. 3449 in Waterloo Road yesterday, Mrs. C. H. Bradley, living at Observatory Villas, was unable to avoid an aged Chinese who had unexpectedly left the sidewalk to cross the road. The victim was knocked down, and received injuries to his left hand. He was taken to the Kowloon Hospital.

The Colony has lost a highly-respected citizen by the death of Mr. William Pope, which occurred at the Victoria Hospital on Tuesday. The late Mr. Pope was 63 years of age, and was an old resident of the Colony, having been out here since 1901. A native of Devonport, the deceased came out to join the Royal Naval Dockyard as a seaman, and later as a ship's officer, a position which he held at the time of his death. The funeral took place at the Protestant Cemetery yesterday and was largely attended, many floral tributes being also sent.

KAREL CAPEK & THE THEATRE

NOT TO WRITE ANY MORE PLAYS

POOR OPINION OF BRITISH FILMS

"I have resolved to write no more plays—either alone or in collaboration with my brother. I have found the theatre an unsatisfactory means of expression."

In these words Karel Capek, the distinguished author and playwright, outlined his literary renunciation of the future. "However imaginative and sensitive producers and players may be," said Mr. Capek, "they cannot convey my ideas as I intend them to be conveyed."

"For this reason I never go to see my own plays performed. I used to go in the early days, but it was nothing less than martyrdom. I wanted all the time to cry out against the company's misinterpretation of my ideas. I know now that I must do only work that I myself can carry through to the end."

He gave a frank opinion of English films. "Czech films are still very bad," said Mr. Capek—and he added that up to now he had had nothing to do with the writing of Czech film scenarios. "But English films are disappointing, too—not nearly so good as American films. No," he said, "your films are bad; it's not your forte."

GALSWORTHY'S FAME.

In reply to a question whether Mr. Galsworthy's work was as much read in Czechoslovakia today as in Germany, Mr. Capek said that it was, and that he had been gripped to hear of Mr. Galsworthy's death. "I met him several times. He looked frail, and there was something 'clerical' about him. I hear that your young writers and critics accuse Mr. Galsworthy, of overmuch sentimentality. But here we admire his work immensely. Although in Bohemia we had no Victorian Age, nor anything like it, Galsworthy, nevertheless, succeeded in making us feel and understand the Victorian atmosphere."

"Many of our young people also admire the work of D. H. Lawrence and Aldous Huxley. I read Huxley's 'Jesting Pilate' with pleasure, but disliked intensely 'Brave New World.' Perhaps that is too mild," continued Mr. Capek. "I really hate that book. It is wicked to suppose that we are anywhere near the kind of future envisaged by Mr. Huxley. We can control our affairs better than that. One thing we can be certain of—that in human life there will always be love and pain."

"The very existence of a new State, such as Czechoslovakia, so alive and so individual, is a reply to those who say that there is a danger of our world becoming more and more monotonously standardised in all its parts."

LOCUST CONTROL

EXPERIMENTS IN ENGLAND

London, Mar. 29.—Experiments are being conducted in this country into the possibilities of locust control by means of subjecting flying swarms to a cloud of poisonous material discharged from an aeroplane.

The Colonial Secretary says it is too early to predict whether progress of the experiments will permit of practical measures in East Africa during 1933.—British Wireless.

$1,586 FOR LOSS OF HAND

JUDGE AND A "WILFUL ACT"

Reserved judgment was given by Mr. Justice Talbot in the King's Bench Division in a personal injury case in which a jury had awarded $1,586 to Edwin George Wheeler, a youth, of Pevensey-road, Tooting, S.W., against his employers, the New Merton Board Mills, Ltd., Merton Abbey, S.W., in respect of the loss of his left hand.

Wheeler was removing waste cardboard from a machine, and his case was that the knives were not guarded.

The company denied negligence or breach of duty.

The jury found that the unguarded machine was dangerous, that the company intended their employees to use it, and that the company was not negligent but their foreman was negligent.

Mr. G. M. Hiberny, K.C., for Wheeler, said, "This case has assumed very great importance because the Court of Appeal recently discovered that there is a section of the Workmen's Compensation Act which, construed in one way, goes to show that a workman has no cause of action for damages in respect of a breach of statutory duty unless there be personal negligence or a wilful act on behalf of the employer."

By permitting an unguarded machine to be used, the company were guilty of "a wilful act," he contended.

Mr. G. J. Paull, for the company, argued that, if an employer appointed a competent person who allowed an unguarded machine to be used, that was an act of a servant and not of the employer.

Giving judgment for Wheeler for $1,586 and costs, Mr. Justice Talbot said he thought that the provision of a dangerous machine for use by the company's workmen was more properly described as "an act" than as negligence.

"I can entertain no doubt," added the Judge, "that the installation of this machine without guard or fence for use in the factory was a wilful act by someone."

Stay of execution, with a view to an appeal, was granted.

"IN A DEN OF LIONS"

ENGLISH M.P. CHAIRMAN OF SCOTTISH COMMITTEE

When the Standing Committee of the House of Commons met to begin consideration of the Scottish Housing Bill, Mr. Kirkwood and other Scottish Labour M.P.s protested against the presence in the chair of Major Entwistle, an Englishman, who sits for a Lancashire constituency.

Mr. Kirkwood admitted that an English M.P., who represented a Scottish constituency, had previously been Chairman of the Committee, and added, addressing the Chairman, "There is not a vestige of a Scotsman about you."

Mr. Duncan Graham said that it was strange that a Government presided over by a Scotsman should agree to such an appointment.

Major Entwistle explained that the appointment was made, not by the Government but by the Chairman of the Panel of Chairmen, and there was no Scotsman available. He had not sought the appointment, which was rather like coming into a den of lions.

Mr. Kirkwood declared that he would see the Speaker and bring up the matter in the House, whether he was in order or not.

CHINA'S FINANCES

OUTLOOK BRIGHTER SAYS T. V. SOONG

Shanghai, Mar. 29.—Interviewed by Reuter to-day, Mr. T. V. Soong stated that the currency unification question was now under the consideration of the Finance Ministry. Its enforcement was only a question of time but the question of what to use nickel cents as a substitute for copper had not yet been decided, because nickel was much more expensive.

Concerning the Sino-Japanese Tariff Pact, he said the pact would be declared null and void upon the expiration on May 16. In future, all Japanese imports must pay duties in accordance with the Customs schedule.

Negotiations with the Powers regarding the moratorium on the Boxer indemnity were still proceeding, and it had not yet been decided when the moratorium would begin.

Mr. Soong declared the financial outlook was brighter. The salt tax was increasing following the reorganization, while steps were being made to improve other taxes.—Reuter's Special.

COLLECTING FUNDS FOR TROOPS

HEARING CONTINUED IN FRAUD CHARGES

At the Central Police Court yesterday afternoon, the case in which three Chinese are charged with a series of frauds in connection with the collection of funds for distressed volunteers in North China was continued before Mr. Wynne-Jones.

Detective-Sergeant Fowle prosecuted and Mr. M. A. da Silva appeared for the defence.

Sung Pui-ching, Manager of the International Trade Development Co. and Kwan Tong, Manager of the Blue Bird confectioners, testified to subscribing $20 each to the defendants. Chan Wah, accountant of the Wah Ying Cheung shop, gave similar evidence, and Lam Sui-tin, manager of the Kwong Wah Jewellers, Queen's Road Central, deposed to giving $5. On each occasion the defendants produced a letter and gave a receipt.

Evidence of arrest was given by Detective-Sergeant Tsui Nam, who stated he saw the defendants enter the Wo Chan shop. The man at the counter told them he had already subscribed and they left. Witness asked them if they had written permission from the S.C.A. to collect funds, and they replied in the negative. Further enquiries were made, and defendants told the police that the letters and books had been given to them by one Ho Ki-cheung, who had since disappeared.

The hearing was further adjourned.

INCOGS CHAMPIONSHIP
HOPES BRIGHTEN
WHY ACTION WAS NECESSARY
SAD LACK OF GROUNDS

[By "Bully-On"]

THE Mamak tournament
will be continued for
another week and will now
close on April 10th instead of March 21st, to enable Clubs to complete their fixtures.

This move was primarily necessitated by the postponement of
two or three of the Incognogames recently on account of inclement weather and it will thus enable them to qualify for the championship honours. Throughout the season the Incogs have
been handicapped by having no ground of their own and have had to arrange their matches for days when the grounds of other Clubs were available.

Another reason for prolonging the tournament is the fact that during the season many of the Naval teams have been out of port on manoeuvres resulting in a cancellation of matches all round. They also have been hampered in regard to grounds.
Their home pitch, when the consent of the Naval Officers is obtained, is the Naval ground at King's Park, and with six naval teams entered there has been a great demand for the use of that field.

The decision of the Mamak committee will, I think, meet with general approval and give the Incogs a sporting chance of lowering the colours of the Radio, present champions and holders of the first position in the league at the present time.

MAMAK DEFEAT FOR
H.K.S.R.A.

Contrary to expectations, the St.
Andrew's hockey team defeated the 1st H.K.S.R.A. on the Marina ground yesterday three goals to nil. The victory was meritorious in view of the Saints playing a man short throughout, A. Hanson failing to turn up.

The H.K.S.R.A. were a formidable team, and at one time were favourites for the championship. On yesterday's form, however, they deserved to lose.
Only in the first half did they prove dangerous, but after being down by two goals in the first half, they allowed their play to deteriorate, and consequently the Saints had matters
practically their own way.

The first goal was netted for the Saints by E. F. Fincher, and before the half-time whistle sounded, Ellis,
the Interport footballer, netted a brilliant goal. The military team were well held in check by the Saints defenders, who gave an excellent display.

The second half was decidedly in favour of the Saints, who were continually pressing. E. F. Fincher added the third goal towards the end.

The match between the Hongkong
Hockey Club seniors and the
H.K.S.R.A. scheduled to be played on the Marina ground, was postponed, as the military side were playing St.
Andrew's.

of New York's Chetto, pounded out a technical knockout over Paul Pirone, Cleveland better, in a fight staged in the Ohio city. Jeby, fists flying, and with his left eye closed and bleeding, had Pirone on the floor, out of the ring and in the sports writer's chair before the bout ended. The above photo shows the boys in action, with

5 MINUTES OF FOOTBALL

SPEED DANGER

"GET ON WITH IT"
FOOTBALL

CONTROL NEEDED

(By "Saracen")

Since the off-side law was altered
the pace of football has been very definitely quickened, but it is very doubtful whether this has been to the benefit of the game.

I am convinced in the first place
that there is a limit to the speed
with which men may play properly and successfully. To trap and get a ball under control takes time no matter how expert the touch of a player
may be and unless he is clever at
this he cannot do his work effectively.
Unfortunately, in the hurry and bustle of the modern game players are so eager to "get on with it" that they do not allow themselves a fair chance
to control the ball and this is one reason why it is so much in the air.

The place for the ball is on the ground and while it must rise evenly the aim of every player should be to keep it there. This is true even of a defender, a back, when it can be done without risk. It is, of course, often essential that a back should run on to the ball and volley it when he is threatened by advancing opponents.
On the other hand he has often time
to bring it down and push it forward
accurately to one of his half backs.
This is obviously a paying move, but though it is seldom carried out, for
to give the ball in this way to a colleague means that the side remain in possession of the ball and the attack is made it is odds on the ball
going to a member of the opposition.

THE GOLDEN RULE.

"Get the ball down." That is a golden rule which should be observed
on every possible occasion. It seems to be thought, however, that in doing this the game is slowed down. But some of the fastest football I have ever seen has been by men who seemed simply to be ambling along. They had the ball on the ground and they glided it to each other without, as the professional says, the opposition getting a kick at it.

It is mainly the half backs who are responsible for the ball being so much in the air. This is specially true of the stopper in the centre who plays
as much with his head as with his feet. But many wing halves are similarly inclined in their impetuosity
to run forward and use their heads
whereas it would be much better if they would move back and so get the ball down.

An outside forward should possess speed because it is up to him to make ground quickly, but if you look at the best teams I think it will be found that the best insides are the slowest.
And they are the best simply because they take the time which, as I have said, is necessary to get the ball under control. Copyright: N.F.L.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

By W. E. McKenney

Charles Gordon of Toronto, Canada, asks me if contract players ever employed the play known as the Bath coup. This is a play that was popular amongst whist players and received its name from the Bath club of London.

This play could very seldom be used in contract, due to the fact that the opening leader would not continue with his suit unless receiving a "come-on" card from partner. However, I recall the following interesting hand which employed this particular play.

♠6-4-3	♥9-5-3	♦A-6-5	♣Q-4-3
♠K-Q	♥10-5	♦A-4-2	♣Q-9-6
♠10-5	♥4-2	♦Q-9-6	♣5
♠A-J-2	♥A-K-Q-8-6	♦K-8-4	♣A-2

The Bidding

The bidding on the hand should be as follows: South should open with one heart. North, the partner, is justified in raising the contract to two hearts. He does not have any ruffing possibilities, although he does have four trump; however, he holds an ace and a queen in addition to the four trump.

This is all the information that South should need in order to bid four hearts.

The Play

West's best opening lead is the king of spades, in order to show the queen. However, it is not wise to open with the king when holding only the queen backed with either the jack or the ten.

We find South with a Bath coup situation, that is, the opening lead as a king and he holds the ace, jack and a small card.

If he plays the small spade and can coax West to continue with spades, you can see that he will now make two spade tricks, therefore the first trick should not be won, but the deuce should be played by South.

West can read that partner's seven is the lowest spade that he holds, therefore he is not asking his partner to continue with spades. West does not wish to lead away from his king of clubs and can see no harm in playing the diamond, therefore he leads the queen of diamonds.

Declarer wins this trick with the king and takes two rounds of hearts, which picks up the outstanding trump.

His next play is a small diamond, and if West carelessly plays a nine spot, the declarer goes right up with the ace in dummy and returns a small diamond which West is forced to win with the jack.

The declarer has lost a diamond and a spade and can lose only one more trick in order to make his contract. You can see that West if helpless.

He holds nothing but spades and clubs. If he leads a small club, the declarer will win with the queen in dummy and will then lose only the jack of spades. If West leads the spade, the Bath

Wrongful Repudiation.
Q.—(a) Did the letters of the 17th February, 1930, the 6th March, 1930, the 19th March, 1930 and 8th April, 1930 or any and which of them constitute the wrongful termination or repudiation of the amended contract by S. Latif Hussain? (b) Is the letter written without prejudice dated 13th May, 1930, admissible as evidence?

A.—Part a: These letters did not constitute a termination but they do, each and all of them, constitute repudiation. Such repudiation was wrongful. Part b: Admitted by agreement of parties.

Q.—If the answer to 7 (a) above is in the affirmative, is S. Latif Hussain liable in damages to Hang Shun and Company for breach of the amended contract?

A.—Following from the above answer the repudiation was accepted by the purchasers on the 8th July 1930 by their consent to arbitration proceedings. Consequently the seller is liable in damages for breach of contract.

Q.—If the answer to 8 above is in the affirmative, is the measure of damages the difference between the contract price and the market price on the 8th April, 1930 and the amount of coal undelivered, namely 35,145 tons, if not, on what principles should the damages be assessed?

A.—The measure of damages is the difference between two prices, calculated as from 17th February 1930 for future deliveries required by the contract. Prices of coal complying in detail with description in contract are alone relevant.

Q.—By the letter of March 25, 1930, did Hang Shun and Company agree to give up their rights under the amended contract or to claim damages for the breach of the said contract and was there any consideration to support such agreement?

A.—No.

Q.—Is evidence admissible to explain the circumstances under which the letter of March 25, 1930, was written and the meaning thereof, and couple play can be completed and the declarer will win two spade tricks and lose only a club.

JAPANESE BOMBING.

AMERICAN MISSION IN SOME DANGER

Peking, Mar. 29. It has been learned that the Japanese Legation has received a communication from the American Legation regarding the alleged bombing by Japanese aeroplanes on March 24, south of the Great Wall, where American mission property was damaged and American lives endangered.

The Japanese Legation is passing the American communication on to the Commander of the Kwantung Army.

On March 24, a Japanese army aeroplane visited Taitouying, six miles south of the Great Wall and a mile north of Changli and dropped a bomb which exploded within 20 feet of the residence of Rev. Charles Kautto, American missionary worker, blowing holes in the compound walls and damaging the house. Other houses in the neighbourhood also suffered damage and several Chinese were killed.

Soon afterwards, another bomb landed also within 20 feet of the Mission Compound, doing more damage. Neither Rev. Kautto nor his wife, who are the only foreigners in that town, was hurt.

An hour later, another Japanese aeroplane visited the town and dropped two more bombs.

As a result of the bombing operations, nine Chinese civilians, including women and children, were killed.—Reuter.

GENEVA RESUMES

ADVISORY COMMITTEE'S FIRST MEETING

Geneva, Mar. 29. The Advisory Committee of Twenty-One sat to 7.15 p.m. last night and adjourned without fixing a date for its next meeting. It is not likely that the Committee will meet again before Easter.

The Committee discussed the general situation arising from Japan's withdrawal from the League, but decided not to call upon the League Secretariat to make any reply to the Japanese Government's notification.

The British Delegate raised the question of Japan's withdrawal from the League and said that while realising that Japan's withdrawal did not concern directly the Committee, he felt perhaps the Committee might adopt a standpoint and recommend a reply to the Japanese communication, pointing out that notwithstanding her withdrawal from the League, Japan remained bound to Article 10 of the League Covenant.

He also disputed the right of Japan, which seemed clear in her note to the Secretariat, as being the sole interpreter of international instruments affecting the relations of other Powers.

There was some discussion round this point, but eventually the Committee decided that, as no point was raised in the Japanese Note which had not already been dealt with, the League Secretariat need not make any reply which, in CRIMINAL APPEAL.

FIRST APPLICATION UNDER NEW LOCAL LAW

The first application for leave to appeal under the Criminal Procedure Amendment Ordinance, 1933, has been made by Joseph Evangelist Bess, who was convicted at the Criminal Sessions last week on a charge of obtaining money by false pretences and sentenced to six months imprisonment with hard labour.

The Ordinance passed its third reading and final stages at a meeting of the Legislative Council last Thursday, and under this Ordinance, if the application is accepted, Bess's case will be heard by the Full Court.

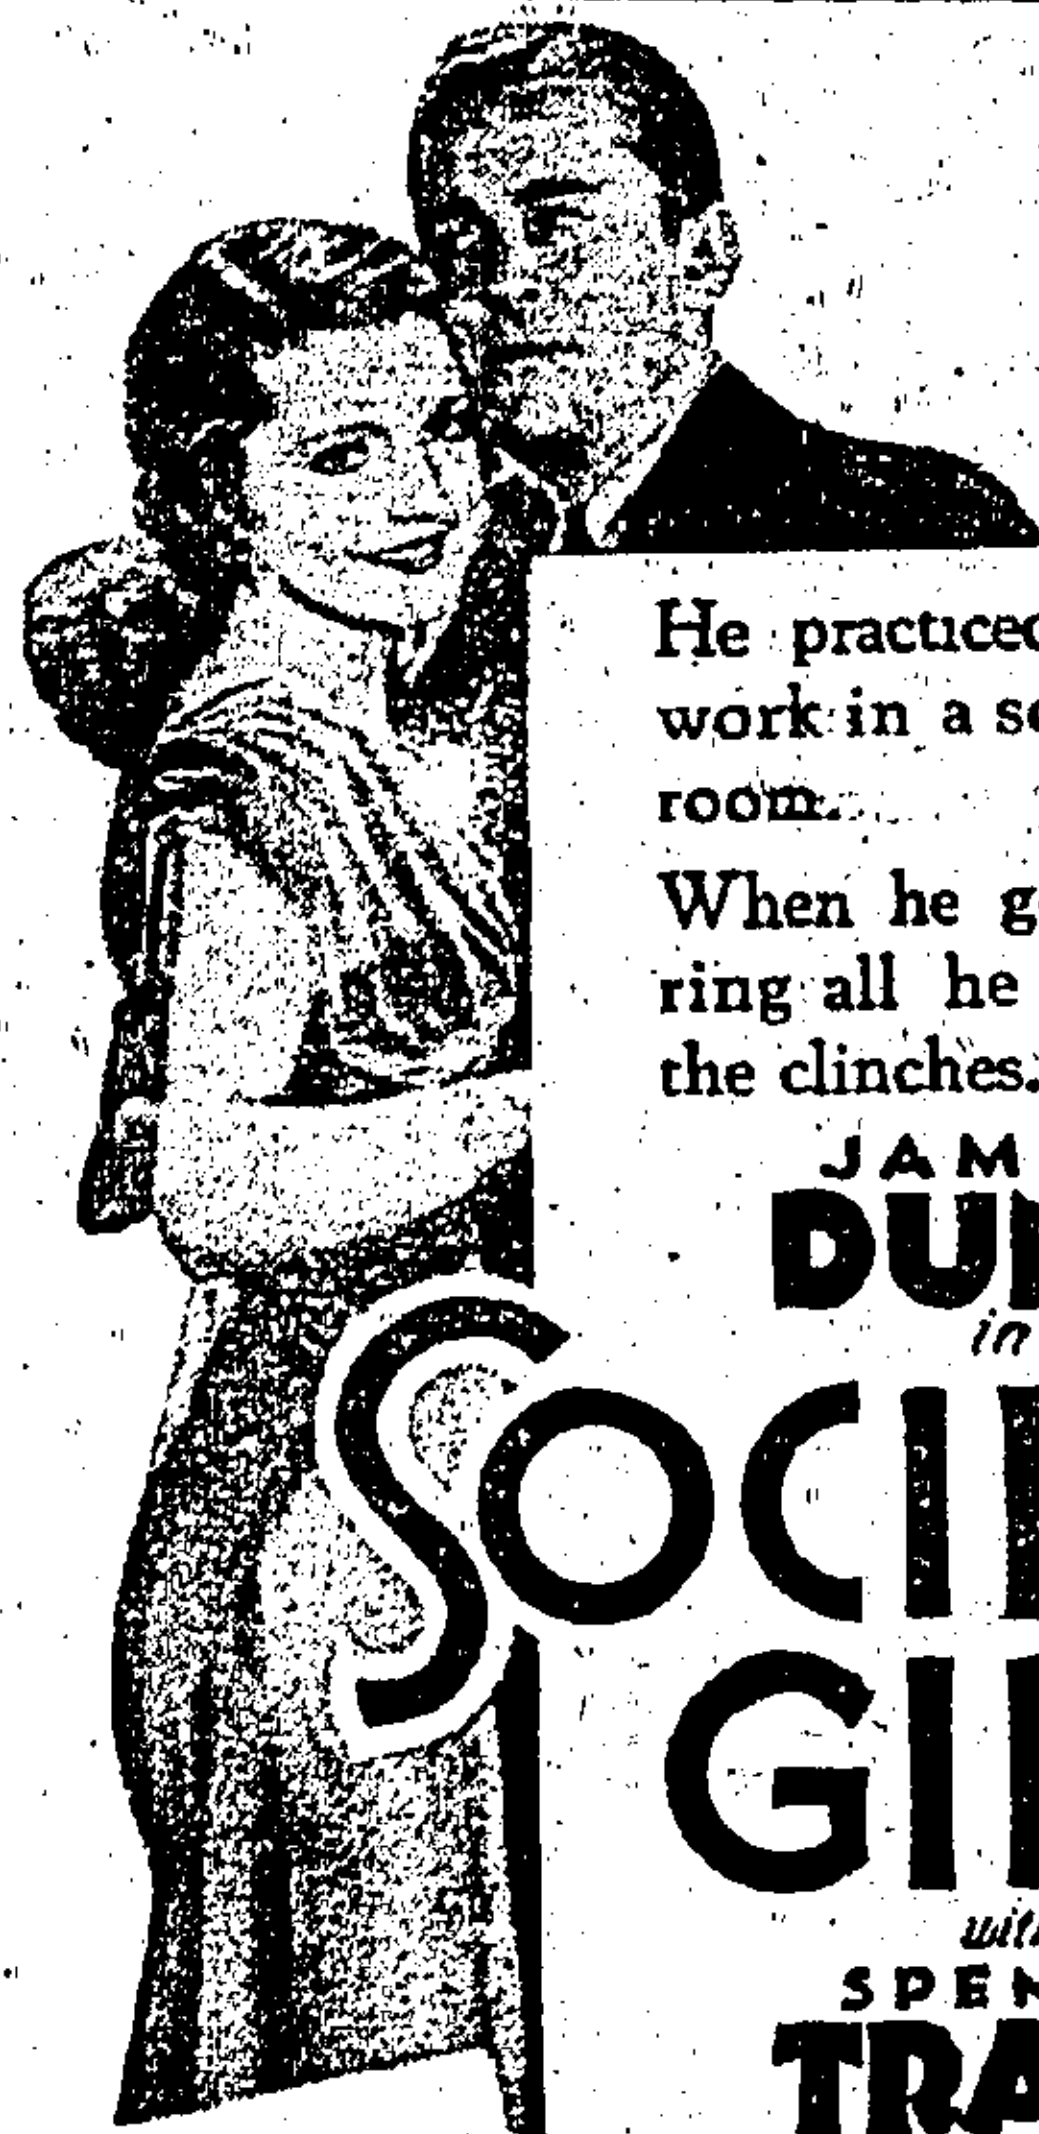

any case, might be considered uncalled for from the Committee.

The Committee then heard a report drafted by Signor Pilotti, the Italian Under-Secretary of the League regarding the question of the non-recognition of Manchukuo—what action should be taken with regard to the Manchukuo claim to the admission to the Telegraph and Postal Union—how to treat the Manchukuo stamps, coins, passports, etc. The report is still very incomplete and have to be submitted to a Subcommittee dealing specially with the non-recognition of Manchukuo, proposed to convene after Easter.—Reuter.

REICH AND JAPAN'S MANDATES

GERMAN ATTITUDE ON ISLAND ISSUE

REFUTE IDEA OF WAR BOOTY

(Special to "Telegraph")

(Telegraph, Copyright, Telegraphic Messages Ordinance, 1931. Received March 30, 9.15 a.m.)

Berlin, Mar. 30. The future of the former German islands held by Japan under League Mandate is the subject of much discussion in political circles.

The general consensus of opinion appears to be expressed by Deutsches Zeitung, which commenting upon Japan's withdrawal from the League of Nations and the position of the mandated islands, remarks that Germany, in no circumstances, wishes to become involved in a conflict with Japan.

FRIENDLY DISCUSSION

Undoubtedly, the journal says it will prove possible through open and friendly discussion to settle all Japanese claims and to quell the anti-German propaganda which is also active in this matter.

At the same time it adds, we must contradict the assertion that the mandated islands are really the war booty of our former opponents and we must hold firm to the existing legal standpoint as expressed in right supervision by the League over the mandated territories.—Reuter.

TURNING-POINT IN FAR EAST

FRENCH VIEW OF WITHDRAWAL

(Special to "Telegraph")

(Telegraph, Copyright, Telegraphic Messages Ordinance, 1931. Received March 30, 6.30 a.m.)

Paris, Mar. 30. Japan's withdrawal from the League has caused very little comment in the French Press which is inclined to view the action as of little moment in view of the knowledge that the step was intended.

Le Temps, however, in the course of a leading article, is of opinion that the withdrawal marks a serious turning-point in international collaboration in the Far East.

ERRORS OF PROCEDURE

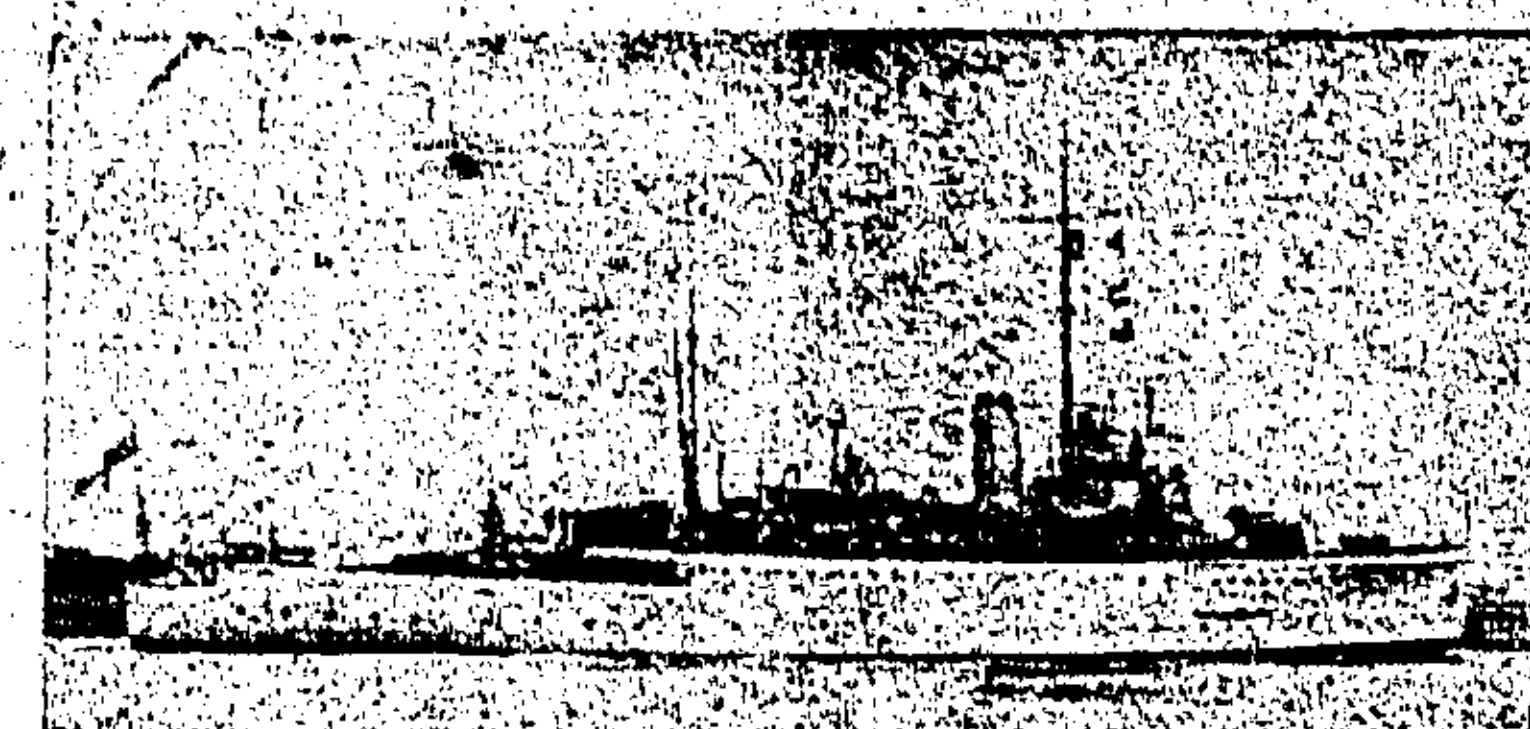

It attributes the withdrawal to errors of procedure by the League since September, 1931, and is of opinion that the only chance of Japan reconsidering the decision lies in the possibility of China agreeing to direct negotiations with Japan which has good reason to believe that events in China will solve the problem.

Until then, the intrigues, confusion and disorder which are ordinary elements of Chinese politics, will continue to prevail.—Reuter.

CATHOLICS WITHDRAW INTERDICTION

Accept Hitler's Promise of Respect for Rights

Berlin, Mar. 29. The conference of Catholic Bishops at Fulda issued a manifesto to-day withdrawing its previous prohibition and warnings against the Nazi movement in view of Herr Hitler's promise that the rights of the Catholic Church in Germany will be respected.—Reuter.

MARKS OF ORIGIN

NANKING'S NEW REGULATIONS

REPRESENTATIONS BY AMERICANS

(Special to "Telegraph")

(Telegraph, Copyright, Telegraphic Messages Ordinance, 1931. Received March 30, 9.21 a.m.)

Shanghai, Mar. 30. The Board of Directors of the American Chamber of Commerce have passed a resolution asking that representations be made to the Nanking Government for the modification of the newly-announced Customs Regulations regarding marks of origin.

The new regulation issued at the beginning to March to take effect as from August 1 requires all imported goods to be marked with the name of the country of origin in Chinese characters.

The American Chamber of Commerce states that if the regulations as promulgated are enforced, very harmful effects will be seen, not only from the viewpoint of foreign business, but also from the viewpoint of Chinese consumers.

The new regulations would, it was stated, in many instances mean the cutting off of certain imports altogether and in the case of others it would involve an increase in prices.—Reuter.

JAPANESE NAVAL COMMAND

APPOINTED TO MANCHUKUO

(Special to "Telegraph")

(Telegraph, Copyright, Telegraphic Messages Ordinance, 1931. Received March 30, 1.18 p.m.)

Tokyo, Mar. 30. Japan will maintain the Naval Command at Changchun as from to-morrow instead of entrusting the naval affairs of Manchukuo to the special Naval Mission.

The Japanese Naval Command will co-operate with the Manchukuo authorities in patrolling the inland waters and coasts in pursuance of the Japanese-Manchukuo Protocol, according to a decree issued by the Navy Office.

The Naval Command will be authorised to use force to maintain peace and order if necessary. Rear-Admiral Kobayashi has been chosen as Chief of the Naval Command.—Reuter.

DOLLAR RISES SLIGHTLY

MARKET CONDITIONS VERY DULL

The Hongkong dollar rose 1/8th this morning to 1s. 3 3/4d. The local market is, however, easy, with no-one inclined to do business. In London, silver advanced 3/16th, whilst in New York there was a rise of 1/8th. The cross-rate is 3.41 1/2.

ATTEMPT TO WRECK EXPRESS

MR. MATSUOKA THOUGHT TO BE OBJECTIVE

Boston, Mass., Mar. 29. An apparent attempt to wreck the express train in which Mr. Matsuoka, the Japanese diplomat, was travelling to Boston, is reported by the railway police who state that two iron rails, wrapped in red and yellow flags, were discovered laid across the track just before the train was due.—Reuter.

FAMINE STALKS IN RUSSIA

MILLION DEAD IN KAZAKHSTAN

TALE OF BRITISH TOURIST

Berlin, Mar. 30. Russia to-day is gripped by a famine as disastrous as the catastrophe of 1921, when millions died of starvation, declared Mr. Gareth Jones, who arrived in Berlin after a long walking tour in Russia.

Mr. Gareth Jones who at one time was political secretary to Mr. Lloyd George, the Liberal leader, is now on his way to London.

He describes conditions as appalling. "Everywhere" was the cry: "There is no bread. We are dying!"

A million persons are already reported to have died in the Kazakhstani district.

PEASANT REVOLT

There is insufficient seed and many of the peasants are too weak to work the land. The tragedy is due to the peasants' resistance to the Government's policy of collectivisation and the lack of skilled labour, together with the collapse of transport and finance.

The arrest of the British engineers of the Metro-Vickers company and the recent shooting of thirty-five prominent agriculturalists were, in the opinion of Mr. Gareth Jones, attempts to appease the popular wrath at the famine.—Reuter.

(Special to "Telegraph")

Washington, Mar. 29. The House of Representatives to-day passed the Bill, which was approved by the Senate by 38 votes to 3, permitting the Government to enlist a quarter of a million unemployed for reforestation work.

President Roosevelt is expected to sign the Bill immediately.—Reuter.

NANCHANG GIVES CHASE

RAIDERS ESCAPE INTO SHALLOW WATER

VAIN EFFORT TO SAVE COLLEAGUES

(SPECIAL TO THE "TELEGRAPH.")

(By Telegraph, Copyright, Telegraphic Messages Ordinance, 1931. Received, March 30, 2.18 p.m.)

NEWCHWANG, MARCH 30. THE DRAMATIC SWIFTESS WITH WHICH PIRATES CARRIED OUT THE COUP ABOARD THE BUTTERFIELD AND SWIRE S.S. NANCHANG THIS MORNING, WAS GRAPHICALLY RELATED BY CAPTAIN ROBINSON ON THE ARRIVAL OF THE VESSEL IN NEWCHWANG.

Only the speed of the enterprise enabled its success. The pirates were aboard for a few minutes only. They seized the four junior officers, bundled them into junk, and made off.

THE NANCHANG WAS QUICKLY IN PURSUIT BY THE PIRATES ESCAPED INTO SHALLOW WATERS WHERE THE DEEPER DRAFT STEAMER WAS UNABLE TO FOLLOW.

Captain Robinson was never in the hands of the raiders. On hearing the sound of shooting, he rushed to the wireless room to give the alarm; only to find that the operator had already fled.

He then hurried to his own cabin to obtain fire-arms, but returning found that all four officers had been kidnapped.

Mustering the terrified Chinese crew, the Captain ordered the anchor to be weighed and gave chase only to lose the pirates in shallow water. The captain and chief engineer were powerless to aid their fellow-officers, being compelled to watch the junks receding into the distance while the wireless operator frantically signalled S.O.S. calls.—Reuter.

SHIP LYING AT ANCHOR

Newchwang, March 30.

The B. and S. steamer Nanchang was pirated this morning outside Newchwang Harbour.

Four British officers and several Chinese were carried off for ransom in junks, from which the raid was successfully carried out.

The European victims of the outrage are:

Mr. Clifford Johnson, the Chief Officer, of Berlan Cliff, Colwyn Bay, North Wales.

Mr. W. E. Hargrave, Second Officer, of Ripon, Yorks.

Mr. A. D. Blue, Second Engineer, of Glasgow.

Mr. F. L. Pears, Third Engineer, of Newcastle.

The Nanchang was lying at anchor just outside the Newchwang Bar, awaiting for a pilot to come aboard to take her into harbour when the attack was launched. A heavily armed gang invaded the ship from three junks and seized control of the Nanchang within a few minutes.

OFFICERS CAUGHT IN SALOON.

The junks appear to have approached the Nanchang and drawn alongside without attracting any attention aboard. The first warning of anything untoward afoot was provided by the opening of a heavy fire by the pirates as they boarded the ship.

Fourteen of the gang actually took part in the boarding, blazing away in all directions with their revolvers with the object of terrorising the crew.

There was no opportunity for defence. The officers were in the saloon when the attack was made.

As far as is known, no attempt was made to loot the ship, the pirates having reason to fear the arrival of the pilot boat and the giving of warning.

Captain J. Robinson, the master of the Nanchang, and Mr. A. Jeffrey, the Chief Engineer, escaped the fate of their colleagues but Messrs. Johnson, Hargrave, Blue and Pears were compelled to go aboard the junks, which immediately set sail. It is thought that the pirates will effect a landing down the coast and take their captives, into the interior.—Reuter.

NEWCHWANG REPUTATION.

The kidnapping of the four British officers suggests a possible repetition of the events at Newchwang last year when Mrs. Muriel Pawley and Mr. Charles Corkran were carried off and held in captivity for several weeks.

Newchwang is in Manchukuo territory, now virtually under Japanese control.

The Nanchang left Hongkong for Sancho, Shanghai and Newchwang on March 16. It is believed that no European passengers were

ARMS FOR FAR EAST

HEAVY JAPANESE PURCHASES

(Special to "Telegraph")

(Telegraph, Copyright, Telegraphic Messages Ordinance, 1931. Received March 30, 5.30 a.m.)

London, Mar. 29.

It was announced in the House of Commons this afternoon by Dr. L. Burgin, of the Board of Trade, that exports of ordnance and high explosives from the United Kingdom to China and Japan during the eighteen months ended in February totalled £51,816 in the case of China and £299,000 in the case of Japan.

The problem of the export of arms in relation to present conditions in the Far East is being examined at Geneva by a sub-committee of the League of Nations Advisory Committee which was set up to follow the developments of the Sino-Japanese dispute.

Capt. Anthony Eden stated in the House of Commons to-day that the members of the Committee yesterday agreed to consult their Governments on the specific questions of principle and of execution placed before them in connexion with disputes in another part of the world. That sub-committee might be in possession of the essential facts as soon as possible, he added.—Reuter and British Wireless.

FATAL TRAIN ACCIDENT

COOLIE RUN OVER AND KILLED

A fatal train mishap occurred at Taipei yesterday morning, when Liu Wong, a coolie employed by the Waterworks Department, was run over and killed.

The victim was walking along the railway lines on No. 32 Railway Bridge and appears to have been oblivious to the approach of the No. 5 down train passing the spot at 10.50 a.m. He was on his way from Taipei Market to Taipei Kau.

Death was instantaneous, the remains being afterwards removed to the Mortuary.

FINANCIER ON TRIAL

CHOSEN SHARE SALES

CHARGES AGAINST MR. HARMAN

London, Mar. 29.

Grave allegations were made to-day, when after a three weeks' interval, the case against Mr. Martin Coles Harman, the well-known London financier, and three other directors of the Chosen Corporation, was resumed at the Guildhall.

The accused are:

Martin Coles Harman, Berkeley Fairfax Conigrave, E. G. Chagant, H. Hely Pounds.

They are charged with, between November 10, 1930 and August 31, 1932, unlawfully conspiring to defraud the shareholders of the Chosen Corporation.

IN DIFFICULTIES

The prosecution alleges that money belonging to the Chosen Corporation was used by Harman, with the concurrence of his co-defendants, to "bolster up" his other companies to get them out of grave difficulties.

The arrests followed a personal application by the Director of Public Prosecutions (Sir E. Tindal Atkinson), and were made at No. 11, Angel Court, the offices of the Chosen Corporation.

Harman is the director of at least fourteen companies, the chief of them being the Chosen Corporation with a capital of £500,000, of which Harman owned three-fifths and the public the remainder.

The co-defendants are also directors of the Chosen Corporation as well as of some of Harman's other companies.

SHARE SALES

The prosecution alleges that between January, 1931 and August 1932, they spent £130,669 in purchasing for the Corporation or its three subsidiaries registered in Japan, 173,029 Chosen shares at an

THE WORLD OF WOMEN

YOUR CHILDREN.

By Olive Roberts Barton

One of the best ways to teach a little child courage or anything in fact, is to do it with him. If he sees someone he loves very much, naturally, a parent, doing something he will not only be braver himself about it, but that imitative interest of his will prove stronger than his dislike.

If a little child sits down to his supper at the big table and sees the others eating chops, gravy, sweet potatoes and pie, while facing him on his own little plate are toast, spinach, and a coddled egg, the chances are he will have to have every bite coaxed into him unless he is exceptionally well trained.

It would be the height of diplomacy, if he must eat at the table for each parent to eat a portion of what he eats, or otherwise try to match their food to his.

Killing Fear of Water

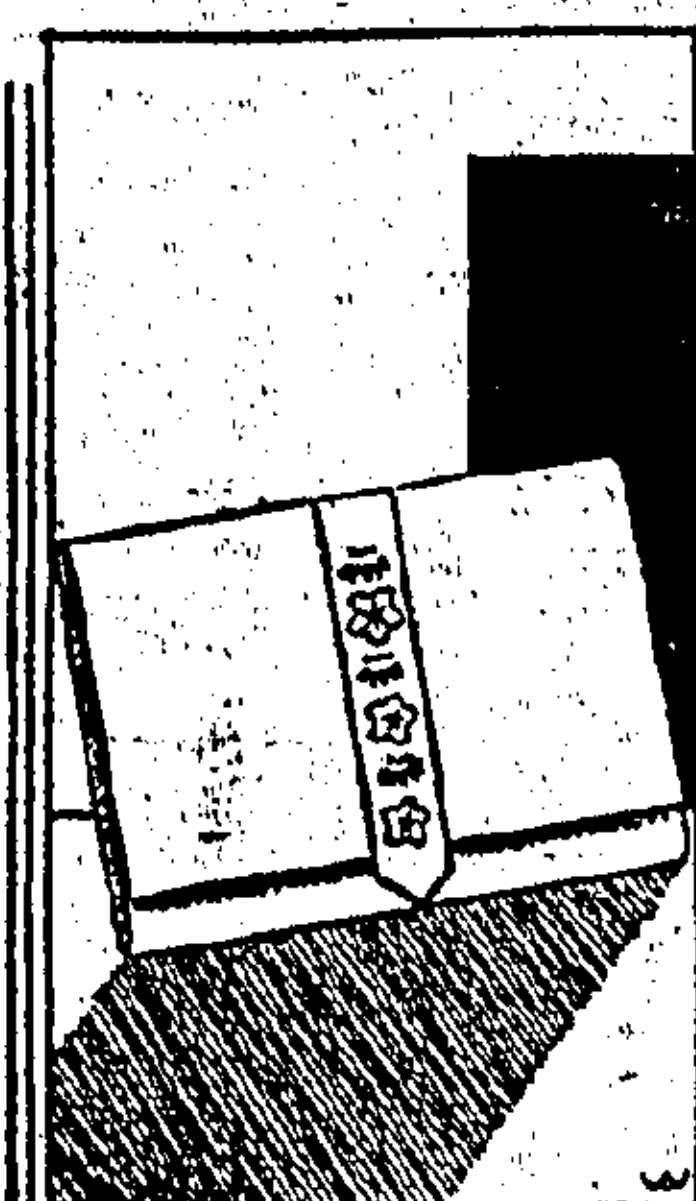

A child screams when he gets washed. Instead of his father locking himself in the bathroom when he washes and shaves and brushes his teeth, his little son might be allowed in to see. And the lesson put over something like this, "Daddy has to be clean. He has to have his teeth brushed, and his ears washed and his hair brushed because if he didn't people would say, 'Oh, what a dirty man! We don't like clean people.' Daddy has a lot of friends because he is so nice and clean."

A child is afraid of water. Well, of course that is a story by itself and the best cure is to put him in an empty tub with no water at first and give him a sponge bath. The next day hal an inch may be put in the tub first and increased daily so slowly that the child won't notice it.

Association of Ideas

But sometimes even that fails. Then it is not beyond all propriety to have him lifted into the tub when his father is in the water or his mother, or someone else in the family he loves. Love is the key to everything.

Children can be cured of certain phobias this way, such as fear of the dark. Again the bathtub tactics may be used, such as closing the door of his bedroom a little more each night until he is in darkness. But this sense of

This is the famous slip-cover bag of pastel linen with trimming of eyelet embroidery and rick-rack braid flowers.

THE HOUSEWIFE'S NOTEBOOK.

Some Hints of Real Value.

A chopped apple added to sag and onion stuffing gives it a better flavour.

The flavour of prunes is greatly enhanced if half a wineglass of port wine is added.

Before peeling potatoes immerse them in boiling water; much less potato will adhere to the skin.

Do not throw away any orange, lemon or grape-fruit peel, put them in the oven, all fumes from the cooking will be eliminated from the room and house. When the peels have gone "chippy" they make excellent fire-lighters.

To clean enamelled furniture remove all marks with a flannel dipped in methylated spirit, then wash with tepid water in which has been added a little oatmeal.

To take tea stains out of silk soak the stains in glycerine, then wash with warm water.

Add a little baking powder to mashed potatoes. This makes them white and light.

terror about a dark room cannot always be discouraged this way. Let something happen so he will be happy in the dark; by association of ideas associate the former bugaboo with something very interesting or very jolly. But be very careful that no queer noises or startling effects come toward him out of the dark. Telling a jolly story in utter darkness is one suggestion and there are other ways. When he learns that darkness contains only happiness he will become very matter-of-fact about it.

No talk about the dark should ever be uttered in his hearing.

You cannot force a child out of a dread. It only accents it all though he may not speak of it. You cannot punish him out of it any more than you could be whipped out of a fear of an airplane or a burglar. The whole trick depends on association of ideas and these ideas must come through substituted interest and through people he loves, trusts and admires. Real bravery is born of intelligent kindness. The bully is the result of ridicule and wrong handling. The bully is an unfortunate coward who is afraid to tell he is afraid.

"HOT" SWEETS.

Some Dainty Recipes.

There are occasions on which things would be greatly simplified or the housewife if she could have the pudding cold. Yet she knows that many people—certainly most men—have a decided preference for hot sweets at lunch or dinner when the weather is as wintry as it is now. A solution of the problem is this: let ginger or peppermint be one of the ingredients, and your cold sweet will not have that bleak chilliness that characterises the usual cream or jelly.

Ginger Trifle

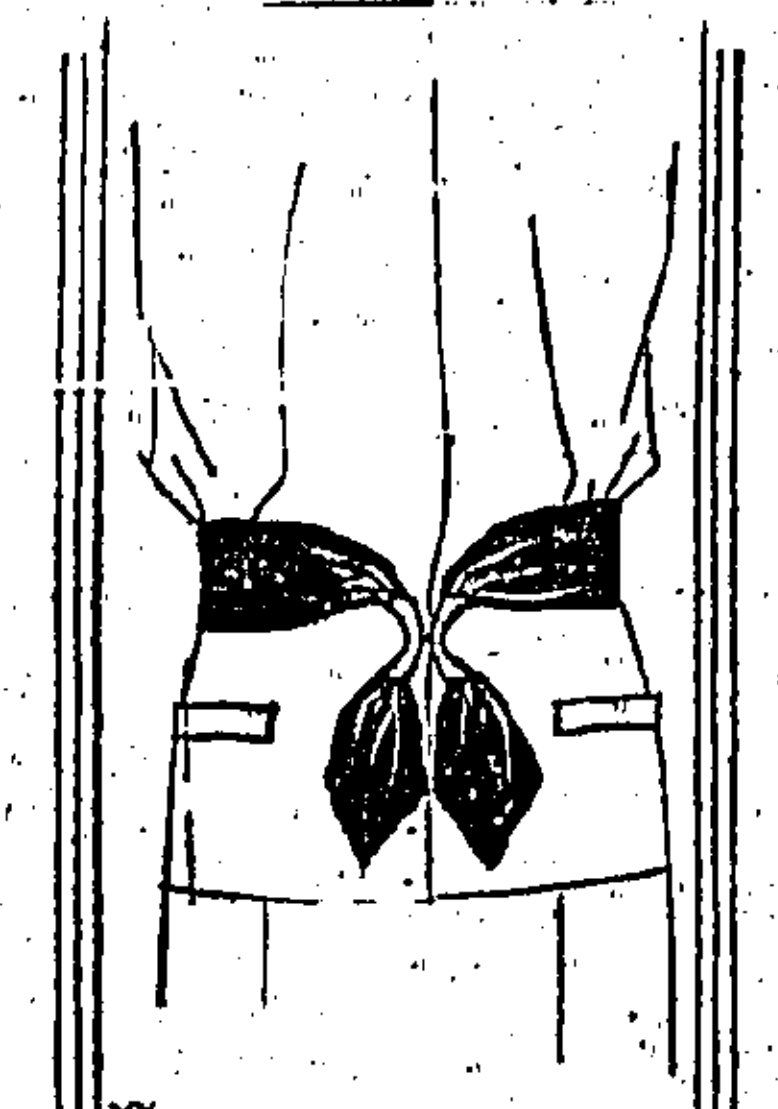

Mix a tablespoonful of some good custard powder with two tablespoonfuls milk (taken from a measured pint) to a smooth paste, oil up the remainder of the milk and pour over the custard, stirring as you pour. Return to the saucepan, add sugar to taste, and simmer for three minutes. Leave the custard to cool, but stir it occasionally to prevent a skin from forming on the top. Meanwhile cut 3 oz. preserved ginger and 2 oz. pineapple into small pieces, cut 6 sponge cakes in two, and spread with apple or rhubarb ginger. Place the cake in a glass dish and pour over enough syrup from the pineapple tin to thoroughly soak. Sprinkle the ginger and pineapple over the sponge cakes, then pour the custard over all. Decorate with chopped ginger or pistachios, or, if expense need not be considered, with whipped cream.

Ginger Cream

Put a breakfastcupful milk in a saucepan and bring to the boil. Beat up three eggs, add to them 1 oz. sugar, and pour over them the milk, just off boiling point. Return to the pan and stir over very gentle heat till the custard thickens, then pour into a bowl and leave to cool. Meanwhile cut 1 oz. preserved ginger into very small pieces and whip up a teaspoonful thick cream or evaporated milk. Dissolve ½ oz. gelatine in a tablespoonful boiling water. When the custard is quite cool, stir in the ginger and ½ teaspoonful ginger syrup, then the gelatine liquid. Pour this mixture into the cream, mix well, turn into a wetted mould, and leave to set.

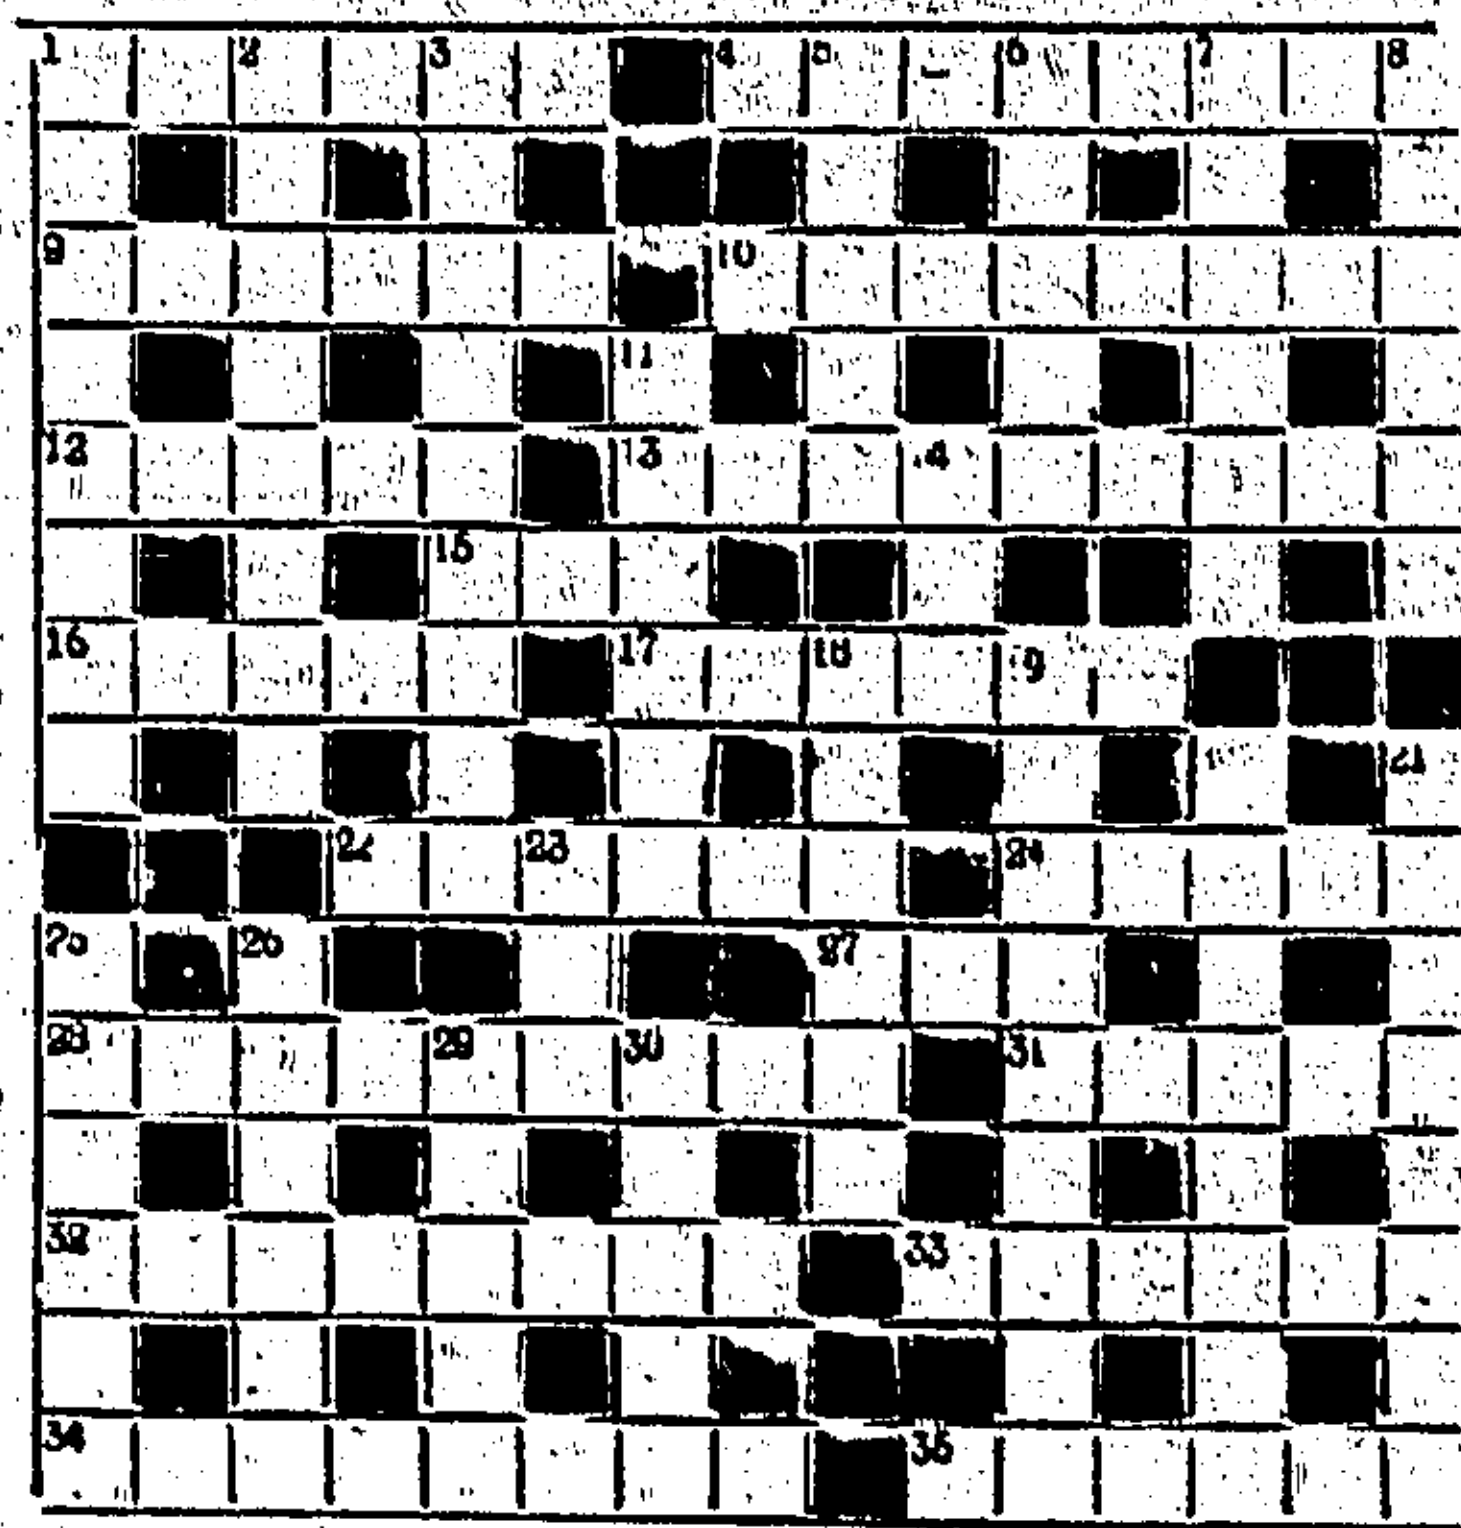

Crepe de Menthe Jelly

Dissolve a pint packet of green gelatin in three teacupfuls boiling water, and add a few drops essence of peppermint. Leave till almost on the point of setting, then stir in two bananas, thinly sliced, and pour into a wetted mould.

This novel belt is made of soft brown suede the ends of which are drawn through two copper tubes which fasten with a hook and eye.

SPOTLIGHT

CHAPTER XXXIX

The girl in the gold chair turned toward the door of the dressing room unexpectantly. She was wearing a beige suit trimmed with huge rings of fur at the shoulders. On her head was a becoming little hat of the same colour. Her shoes, gloves and hand bag were of identical hue.

As she looked at Sheila she smiled in recognition. Sheila returned the smile hesitantly. Should she speak to this girl who looked so familiar? Who was she? Sheila knew she had seen her and talked with her some where. But where? Who could she be?

Nodding slightly, still smiling, Sheila walked to the far end of the room where Henri, resplendent in striped trousers, morning coat and gardenia, was whisking about, rubbing his hands together and beaming. He was a vastly different Henri now than when Sheila had met him an hour earlier. She smiled at the thought. She herself, changing from her own inexpensive frock to this costly model, appeared to be a different person, too.

As she passed Henri she glanced at him and he bowed just as he would have bowed to a valued customer. She was amused but took her cue from that. She was to walk about, to sit down, to inquire about prices and fabrics and appear to be one of the shoppers.

Without conceit Sheila knew that no one in the room was better dressed than herself. Henri had seen to that. He had selected a costume for her that was exactly right to bring out her excellent coloring, the perfection of her figure.

She walked easily and gracefully. That was due to her years of training as a dancer. Sheila carried herself beautifully erect. She moved about the room, then sank into a chair. Henri nodded slightly in approval.

Presently he came toward her. "You're doing well," he approved. "Two women have asked me who you are already."

"Does that help?" asked Sheila. Henri raised his eyes. "Help? They will say if I can make you look so beautiful I can do the same for them. They know the models are hired for their looks and ability to wear clothes. They think you are a client like themselves. Yes, my dear, it helps."

"Shall I talk to anyone?" asked Sheila as Henri prepared to move away.

"Of course. If anyone asks questions you can say Henri made your frock so long as you do it without seeming to introduce the subject. That's the idea. You're doing fine."

He moved away and as he did so the girl in beige approached.

"You don't remember me, do you?" She said. "Mind if I sit down?" She opened her purse and drew out a jeweled cigarette case. "Will you join me?" she asked. As Sheila shook her head the other girl laughed easily.

"You haven't been here before? Henri doesn't mind so long as you don't burn holes in his mauve carpet. Of course I know you're Sheila Shayne but you don't know me, do you?"

"I'm afraid I don't. You see, I meet so many people."

"Oh, of course. Well, I didn't expect you would. I'm Dorothy Trevor. Dick Stanley's cousin. Oh—Trevor Lane's cousin, too. Oh—I'll bet Trevor got you this job, didn't he?"

"You know I'm working here?" Sheila asked.

Dorothy laughed. "Of course. You're much too good looking to be doing anything else. I didn't think you bought your clothes here because I knew who you were." She colored and went on quickly. "I mean actresses don't shop here as a rule. Don't misunderstand me! Henri is too expensive for anyone who knows the value of money."

She lighted the cigarette and regarded Sheila. "I hope I don't seem terribly rude but I'm really interested in you. Ever since I saw you dance that night at Trevor's—"

"As a matter of fact I sang," Sheila said quietly. She recognized the girl now. She was one of the cousins from boarding school for whom Lane had given the party.

"Indeed you did!" the girl replied without embarrassment. "But you danced with Dick afterward. And I saw you several times dancing at the Club Volens last summer. I think you're wonderful!"

Sheila could not help liking this girl. The admiration in her eyes and tone were not feigned. She could not have been more than 18 in spite of her veneer of sophistication.

"I can't be very good or I'd have a job now," Sheila replied modestly.

The other girl's eyes widened. "But this is a job, isn't it? I'd love to wear all these pretty frocks and walk around and listen to Henri rave! I'll bet he can rave, too!"

"Oh, he's all right." "Well, I suppose he's no worse than the stage managers," Dorothy interposed comfortably. "Near they say the most terrible things and work you until you're ready to drop."

"We manage to survive," Sheila answered in amusement. "The other nodded. 'I really do wish I had a job but Trevor says nowadays with so many people needing work it would be a crime to take a job just for fun.'"

"What does Dick say?" Sheila asked idly.

"Dick? He can't say much. He's so busy he doesn't know what's going on any more. He did say, though, it would be a crime for anyone to let me have a job! Dick doesn't seem to think I'm very useful. You couldn't get me in here, couldn't you? I'd love it!"

They were interrupted by a boy with a message for Miss Trevor. "Mr. Stanley would like to speak to you on the telephone," the boy told her.

Dorothy turned toward Sheila. "It's Dick," she said. "I was to meet him for lunch!" Impulsively she put a hand on Sheila's arm.

"Listen, you'll have to eat somewhere. Why don't you join us? I'll send word to Dick to pick us up here. He'll love it. Henri'll let you go, won't he? I'll ask him myself!"

"Oh, I couldn't—" Sheila began but the other interrupted.

"Of course you can. Please!"

"Well—if it's all right."

Dorothy rose. "Then that's settled," she said. "I'll talk to Dick right now and tell him." She sped in the direction of the telephones.

Sheila, left alone, thought that the reason this girl was so cordial was because of the glamour associated with stage life. That was why Dorothy Trevor had invited her to lunch. She would enjoy being seen with a girl who had been the featured dancer in stage productions, an entertainer in one of the best night clubs. It would be something to tell her friends later. Hundreds of other people seemed to feel the same way.

Sheila reflected that once she had talked about this matter with a well known star.

"Don't let it bother you," the older woman had said. "It's simply the way things are. After all, on the stage we try to bring glamour into the lives of the members of our audience. They live through the roles we play and they see us in those parts—not as human beings like themselves."

That was it. An actress was supposed to be "different." That was why Jerry had hurt her so cruelly. He didn't think anyone would expect him to be sincere with a girl on the stage as with other girls. That was why Dorothy was excited by the prospect of going to lunch with her.

Well, she would lunch with Dorothy and Dick. Suddenly it occurred to Sheila that, of all the men and women whom she knew, Dick Stanley did care for her for herself alone. Cared for her? More than that, Dick loved her.

Why couldn't she care for Dick as she did for Jerry? Sheila thought mournfully that everything in the world seemed sadly mixed up.

PRESS DIRECTORY.

DETAILS OF PAPERS PUBLISHED IN CHINA

Messrs. Carl Crow, Inc., of Shanghai, have issued the second edition of their "Newspaper Directory of China", which includes a section on Hongkong. It is a most useful publication from the advertiser's point of view in particular, as the addresses, size, number of pages, and circulations of each newspaper, Chinese and English-language alike, are given, as well as the potential reading public in each area.

The tabulated reading-public figures are especially valuable as they show how many people in proportion to population are reached, and in Hongkong it is shown that the figure is as high as 1,697 per 10,000, which is exceeded only by Shanghai. It is pointed out in the publishers' preface, however, that many more people read the papers than is indicated in these figures, which deal with circulation returns, for in China, in particular, newspapers are passed on through many hands.

NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE

YESTERDAY'S MARKET WEAK

According to Messrs. Swan, Culbertson and Fritz, the New York market was weak yesterday. Business done: 640,000 shares. The Wall Street Journal reports: Stocks went up when wheat rose, due to inclement weather reports, and sagged when wheat eased owing to profit-taking. There was not much change in the entire list at the close, traders continuing aloof. German Bonds broke sharply. The National Raw Silk Exchange granted members' petition to make Good Friday, the 14th April, a holiday, but refused to close on the 15th.

THE NAZIS AND THE JEWS

Whilst it is now made clear that it is the Nazi Party, and not the Hitler Government, which has proclaimed a universal boycott of Jews throughout Germany, the situation is, none the less, far from reassuring. Indeed, as Herr Hitler is the head both of the Government and the Nazis, the impression is naturally created that the boycott has official sanction, the more so as Hitler himself has long been known for his anti-Jewish outlook. The only circumstance which can dispel this belief will be for the Government not only to disown association with the movement, but to take energetic steps to see that it is suppressed. It was less than a week ago that Captain Goering, the Nazi Speaker, assured the foreign press that the Government had no intention of discriminating against Jews or of interfering with their personal liberties, whilst Herr Hitler himself has promised effective justice to all religions and races. Yet we now have a situation in which the Nazi Party is to put into effect a rigorous anti-Jewish campaign affecting schools, the legal and medical professions and businesses generally. Even newspapers are to be compelled to join in the movement, those which do not do so being banned from German houses, while no German businesses will be permitted to advertise therein. If this is freedom and justice, the terms badly need revising. Whatever the grounds for complaint against the Jews, there can be no possible justification for the employment of such methods. The root of the trouble would appear to lie in Nazi intolerance. The Nazis have no use for any but out-and-out Nazis; all other schools of thought are practically grouped together as enemies of the State. Such a complex is surely sadly out of joint with modern conceptions. It is charged against the Jews, amongst other things, that they are Marxists. Some may be, but it is surely a straining of the facts to class all Jews as of one political persuasion. Common-sense rejects any such contention. Thus to classify the Jews and to subject them to universal persecution is only likely to heighten racial prejudices and possibly lead to excesses of the gravest kind. If this is the Nazi conception of government, little more remains to be said. But no faction can hope to rule a nation on such lines. The day is long past when Jews were regarded as social pariahs. By a wonderful evolution and a steady triumph over disabilities and oppression, they have produced a host of men of distinction and power in all walks of life, especially financial and political. Any plan of ostracism is bound to arouse world antagonism and can never hope to succeed. The world today wants broad-mindedness and toleration. A vitiated sense of ultra-nationalism can only lead to world disaster. That is why, on large and general grounds, the Nazi campaign will assuredly meet with widespread disapproval.

Shipping Prospects

There seems to be good ground for the air of cautious optimism adopted by Mr. J. P. Warren at the annual meeting of the Kowloon Dock Company with regard to the future of the shipping industry. During the last three months there has been a reduction in laid-up British tonnage of 325,000 tons gross. This is about 10 per cent. of the total of idle tonnage three months ago, or 15 per cent. of the idle tonnage if we exclude vessels more than twenty years old. He would be an optimist who considered that much of the twenty-year-old tonnage will ever go to sea again in competition with modern vessels which can operate at costs ranging from 50 per cent. to 75 per cent. of those of these old ships. We may therefore deduce the notable fact that all the reasonably economic tonnage now idle will be absorbed within about eighteen months at the present rate of progress. And it cannot be objected that the last three months have seen a very notable increase in world trade. It has been quite moderate, and the rate of increase is certainly unlikely to be any lower during the next year. This examination leads to the conclusion that a distinct revival in shipbuilding, more particularly cargo shipbuilding, is much nearer than is generally imagined. It is frequently forgotten that scarcely three years ago most of the world tonnage was fully occupied and that the figure for idle tonnage was negligible. Even a 10 per cent. improvement in world trade would set nearly all the idle ships moving, and it is surprising how rapidly tonnage could be absorbed. And once tonnage begins to move again there should be a boom, if only of temporary duration, in the ship-repairing yards.

Culture on a Peg

An amusing article in a recent issue of the Bookman pokes good-humoured fun at those who take their culture for "an airing" in the circles they frequent. Pushkin, Russian poet, is the peg on which Mr. Winthrop Parkhurst hangs his homily. At a parlour gathering some highly cultured person, in reverential tones, utters the poet's name. "Ah, yes," his hearers exclaim, knowingly, "Pushkin." Then silence. All—including the cultured one—are equally afraid of being asked to quote the poet, not a line of whose poetry they have ever read. Mr. Parkhurst's gentle satire finds even larger scope when it comes to pronunciation. What suspicion is directed at the unfortunate individual who accents the word "irreparable" on the third instead of on the second syllable! Really, no self-respecting scion of the intelligent can be expected to invite such an one to dinner. Max Beerbaum, in one of his inimitable pen portraits, describes the peculiar, not to say superior, sense of satisfaction the average Englishman derives from the knowledge that he has at his command some colloquial French and a not too comic accent. Until, on one inauspicious day, he hears another Englishman who possesses still more colloquial French with an accent much less comic. Such encounter spells his Waterloo. Philosophy holds no panacea to cheer his despairing mood. Disillusion haunts his ever more halting essays at talking French. Sometimes it even breaks him of the habit. One pet Pushkin is taken less often for an airing.

HOW I READ MYSELF TO SLEEP

By ROBERT LYND

A Correspondent has written for my opinion on the best books for reading in bed.

His own choice of bedside books, he declares, is as follows: 1, Montaigne's Essays; 2, W. H. Hudson, Cobbett's "Rural Rides" or White's "Selborne"; 3, a current book.

It would be difficult to make a better selection if one must make a selection at all. For my own part, however, I confess I have no special bedside favourite among books. I go on reading in bed what I was previously reading in a chair, whether it is Wordsworth or Wodehouse.

THE NARCOTIC SLEUTH

Or, if I make a change, it is usually in favour of a detective story. I find that there is nothing like a really exciting story for sending one to sleep. There is a common theory that the best books to read in bed are those that will soothe one into somnolence. My own experience has taught me otherwise. I sleep most easily when I am reading a book that makes me long to keep awake in order to find out what happened, and when through sheer weariness I cannot keep even one eye open.

The usefulness of detective stories for reading in bed may, I think be explained easily enough. In reading a detective story one is, I imagine, making use of only about one-tenth of one's brain. Even if this one-tenth is enormously excited, the other nine-tenths gradually relax into a gentle drowsiness against which, after a time, the one-tenth struggles in vain.

Take, for example, a recently published sensational novel, which begins:

Murder had been the fixed purpose for two weeks of Eyllife Trent Van Maarden, the scion of one of the oldest Dutch families of New York, last descendant of the name of Jan Van Maarden, friend of the great Peter Stuyvesant.

At first sight that may not appear to be a sentence likely to induce the innocence of sleep. It contains elements more suggestive of nightmare horrors. The fact remains, however, that at the back of one's mind one does not believe sufficiently in Eyllife Trent Van Maarden to care whether he commits murder or not. He does not, like Raskolnikov, in "Crime and Punishment" become one of our own flesh-and-blood neighbours, disturbing the depths of our terrors and sympathies. If Eyllife chooses to commit murder we feel that it will only be a make-believe murder by a puppet. Nearly all the most enjoyable detective stories—whether Conan Doyle's or Edgar Wallace's—are stories about puppets and make-believe. Even while we are being harrowed, we know in our hearts that there is no need to worry. Though the heroine is imprisoned in a cellar, gagged and bound, with the water slowly rising to her chin and a tarantula about to drop on her from the ceiling, we realise that there is nothing in the situation to prevent an honest man from enjoying a good night's sleep.

THE PERFECT SCOUNDREL

Much and often as I enjoy reading detective stories in bed however, I should not care to be doomed to sleep for the rest of my life

in a room that contained nothing but the latest sensational fiction. I should in time get tired of Myra with the red hair and the green eyes; and of the wicked Sir Charles, and of the blackmailer with the gun in the sports car; and in a mood of reaction would long for Hooker's "Ecclesiastical Polity" or Blankinship's "Economic Causes of the Peloponnesian War"—for any book, indeed, that did not happen to be there.

In bed, one likes to have within reach one or two books that one knows so well that one can dip into them almost anywhere, sure of enjoyment.

I do not know whether Dickens would be a good author to read in bed if one had never read him before. Probably he would keep one awake all night. But what an excellent book "Our Mutual Friend" is to go back to between getting into bed and falling asleep. Let that arch-soundless Silas Wegg, open his lips to speak and at once all seems for the best in the best of all possible worlds.

THE WEIGHT OF SHAKESPEARE

All the books that people praise as bedside books are, like "Our Mutual Friend," good dipping books. Boswell's "Johnson" and "Tour to the Hebrides" are probably the best books of the kind in the English language. Lamb's letters and essays are almost as good. And, besides the books named by my correspondent, Walpole's letters, Pepys, Cobbett's "Advice to Young Men," Thoreau's "Walden," "Religio Medici," "Pride and Prejudice," and Mr. Norman Ault's "Elizabethan Lyrics" might be included in the list.

Shakespeare is one of the best authors to read in bed, but he wrote an inconveniently large number of plays, and a one-volume edition is at once too bulky and printed in too small type to make a perfect book for holding under a bedside lamp.

The Oxford Dictionary, again, would be an ideal book to read in bed, if it were possible to read a large book in bed. Books for reading in bed, however, have to be judged not merely by their contents, but by their size, weight and type. The fact that Marcus Aurelius has for a long time been a favourite bed-book is said to be largely due to the size, weight and type of the popular editions of his work.

AND WHAT TO AVOID

I am not sure, however, whether reading in bed is a practice to be commended. Most of us were warned against it as children, and if you took a plebsite of the community to-day you would probably find that there are thousands of good citizens who prefer to put themselves to sleep by counting imaginary sheep or, like a man I know, by counting the people with whom, during a long life, he has quarrelled.

If people must read in bed, however, and if I am asked to express an opinion on the best books for reading in bed, I must give my vote either for books that can be read over and over again or for books that no same man would wish to read a second time.

The book to avoid reading in bed is the fairly well-written serious book. This awakens the spirit of criticism—and the reader.

The Very Idea!

PLEASE DO NOT CHIT

By Eddie "I.O.U." Kelly.

MONEY!

What, we have often wondered, was it like?

We have often heard of the stuff. Sometimes shroffs have even asked us for some.

And we've always known that people who sit behind large cages in banks, with heaps of brains protruding from large bald heads like an ostrich egg, only pinker, have most of it. But none of them have ever given us a free sample.

So we decided yesterday to find out what all this gold trouble in the world was about.

First of all, we discovered, gold is useless to-day because you can't eat it, or wear it, or light a fire with it.

So useless is gold that if the world is ever to go straight again we must go back to the old system of barter.

Pete and us tried the scheme last Christmas. We asked Pete what he'd like for a Christmas present.

"Well, if it's all the same to you, Eddie, ole pal ole pal, ole pal, I'd rather have the money," he said. So we gave him a ten buck note.

He asked us what we'd like for a present.

"If it's all the same to you, Pete, me boy, we'd prefer the money, too," we replied.

So he gave us back our ten dollar note.

Of course, this barter business is all very well in theory, but it doesn't always work.

Supposing you keep a butcher's shop. What with spring coming on, and the birds twittering in the trees, and the G. F. looking askance at the soup stains on your vest, you naturally feel like a new suit. So you pop along to Pete, who is a tailor and you say: "Look here, Pete, you make me a nice new suit, with an extra pair of pants thrown in, and I'll let you have half a dozen Sunday joints and some gilets."

And Pete says: "That's Oke by me, Hee. (or Charlie, as the case may be)," and presently around comes the suit.

About a month later, Pete rings you up, and complains that the last three joints have gone a little so-so, only more so, owing to the weather.

And then you say: "I'm sorry to hear that, Pete, but as your suit has started bagging at the knees, we'll call it quits."

On the other hand, should you happen to be an undertaker instead of a butcher, you offer him a nice, slap-up funeral, with feathers and tomb-stone and he says, "But I never felt better in my life. What could I do with a funeral?"

So you settle matters by giving him a chit for one posh funeral, to be supplied on demand.

Now, chits written on perishable paper have a way of wearing out. Not that any we've signed have, but it can happen.

So in order that there shall be no dithering or dirty work, you have this chit printed on something more permanent than paper, such as copper, or gold, or silver.

And there you are. That's money.

A TRAGEDY OF LAUGHTER.

In the course of a long experience covering some nineteen summers (said he, blushing like a pillar-box) I have noticed (and you'd better take a long breath here, because this is going to be a dickens of a sentence), I have noticed that owing largely to lack of initiative, foresight, enterprise, eagerness, inventiveness, exertion, imagination, authority, unanimity, strategy, assiduity, capability, and a few other virtues that I haven't room for, the modern party is too often a full-fledged flop; with all the guests over-fed and all the couches overloaded, the best chairs full of obese ladies, and old fogies making agricultural noises in the next room because they work so hard at meals that they're tired out. Well, we must alter all that. We must do something to get a spot of pep into the doings, liven things up. (Loud laughter, in which two other people joined.) This stopped him and what he was going to say for the benefit of our Bright Young Things and their cousins, the Not Quite Bright Young Things, was irrevocably lost to his world.

A BETTER WORLD.

When we pass on to our reward, we will do so with the knowledge that we have left this world a better, purer, and nobler place than we found it.

When we think of all the tempting unloved girls we have met in Hongkong, of the gallons of beer to entice drinkers, of the opportunities for gambling and dissipation—in short, of all the wickedness that is in our Colony—then we find it pleasing to reflect that we have done our darndest to remove most of the temptations.

"Here you are, madam, a perfect match for your costume—and would you care to see our new spring line?"

SOVIET ADAMANT

METRO-VICKERS TRIAL TO PROCEED

AMBASSADOR'S VISIT

Moscow, Mar. 29. Acting on instructions from London, Sir Esmund Ovey, the British Ambassador, paid another visit to the Foreign Commissariat to-day in connection with the arrest of employees of Metro-Vickers.

In the course of the interview, M. Litvinoff said:

"Methods of crude outside pressure may sometimes be effective in Mexico, but in Russia they are fated to fail."

According to a semi-official statement, the Ambassador went to inform the Foreign Commissariat what steps the British Government proposed to take if the trial was not cancelled, but Sir Esmund Ovey refrained from specifying the measures when M. Litvinoff declared that the case will be tried shortly and that it is useless for the British Government to attempt to change that decision.

IZVESTIA INTERVIEW.

Izvestia has published an interview with M. Vishinsky, the Public Prosecutor, in connection with the case, in which M. Vishinsky vigorously denies the rumours that the prisoners have been subjected to "third degree" or any other kind of pressure.

The accused, he states, will be given a public trial in the Supreme Court and the trial will probably commence early next month. Foreign counsel may attend the hearings but will not be permitted to act for the accused.

The public prosecutor said the case was passed over to the prosecuting authorities by the O.G.P.U. on March 19. It was now being investigated with a view to a thorough elucidation of all the circumstances. A number of the accused, both Russian and British, had already been examined.

"SPECIAL INSTRUCTIONS"

They were being prosecuted on charges of deliberate injury to the equipment of electrical enterprises, deeds perpetrated "in accordance with special instructions," constituting a crime as defined in Article 58 of the Criminal Code, also for other crimes including the giving and acceptance of bribes. The present judicial investigation would be completed within the next ten days or so and the case would then be tried by a special session of the Supreme Court.

"The present judicial investigation is being conducted in strict keeping with the provisions of the Soviet Code of Criminal Procedure. Only enemies striving by every means to worsen our relations with other States could spread absurd rumours alleging deviations from the established rules of procedure, which we are strictly carrying out."

DEFENCE ARRANGEMENT.

In answer to Izvestia's inquiry as to arrangements for the defence of the accused, Mr. Vishinsky explained that the accused, including the six British subjects, were at liberty to engage any member of the Bar for their defence. Otherwise they would be defended by a person specially provided for by law.

"According to the existing laws of the U.S.S.R., as with most other countries, including England, foreign barristers are not permitted to act for the defence. This naturally does not mean that foreign counsel cannot be present at the trial, since there can be no limitations in this respect. The case will be tried at a special public session of the Supreme Court. It will probably commence early in April."—Reuter and Tass.

TRIAD SOCIETY REVENGE

MAN PUSHED INTO THE SEA

Because he would not join their club, Chan Cho-tak, a sampan man at Aberdeen village, was treated by three Triad Society men in summary fashion last night, when he was brutally assaulted in Main Street, and finally pushed over the sea-wall.

The affair is likely to have a grave complication, as, in falling, the victim landed on rocks exposed by a low tide, and received injuries which included a fractured skull. Cheung Shing-lee, alleged to have been implicated in the case, is in police custody, while the arrest of the two other men, whose names and description have been furnished, is being sought.

DAY BY DAY NEWS IN BRIEF

IT IS THE INTEREST OF THE COMMERCIAL WORLD THAT WEALTH SHOULD BE FOUND EVERYWHERE.—BURKE.

"The Problem of Education in Hongkong" formed the subject of a most interesting presidential address given by Rev. Fr. G. Byrne before a meeting of the University Education Society in the University Assembly Room last night.

Driving a car, No. 3449 in Waterloo Road yesterday, Mrs. C. H. Bradley, living at Observatory Villas, was unable to avoid an aged Chinese who had unexpectedly left the sidewalk to cross the road. The victim was knocked down, and received injuries to his left hand. He was taken to the Kowloon Hospital.

The Colony has lost a highly-respected citizen by the death of Mr. William Pope, which occurred at the Victoria Hospital on Tuesday. The late Mr. Pope was 52 years of age, and was an old resident of the Colony having been out here since 1901. A native of Devonport, the deceased came out to join the Royal Naval Dockyard as chargehand of ships fitters, a position which he held at the time of his death. The funeral took place at the Protestant Cemetery yesterday and was largely attended, many floral tributes being also sent.

DIXMUDE AIR MISHAP

INVESTIGATION PROCEEDING

FIRST DISASTER OF CLASS

London, March 29.

The examination and removal of the wreckage of the air liner "City of Liverpool" which met with disaster, near Dixmude, began this afternoon in the presence of a British Air Ministry Inspector and the Belgian air authorities.

The King, in a message to the Imperial Airways Chairman, Sir Eric Geddes, expresses deep sympathy with the relatives of the passengers and crew who lost their lives and with the Company.

COMMONS QUESTION.

Sir Eric Geddes, in a public statement, says that to those who direct and work for the Imperial Airways, the deplorable accident is a great blow and the shock is greater owing to the pride they took in their nine years' record, during which 10,600,000 miles had been flown.

An official inquiry is being conducted, it is undesirable to hazard a guess as to the cause of the disaster, but every possible assistance will be given by the Company to ascertain it and to take all possible precautions to prevent further accidents.

In their grief at the bereavements suffered, the Company find some consolation in the confidence shown on all sides and in the fact that the passengers who had applied for reservations to-day on some of their services exceed the accommodation available.

PUBLIC STATEMENT.

The air disaster was the subject of a question in the Commons where the Under-Secretary for Air, Sir Philip Sassoon, said the aircraft appears to have caught fire in the air.

Until the receipt of the preliminary report from the Inspector of Accidents this morning, it is not possible to make any further statement.

In the meantime, reports such as that the fire started in one of the engines should be treated with the greatest reserve. Sir Philip Sassoon recalled that since the last accident attended by loss of life, nearly 2½ years ago, Imperial Airways had flown over four million miles and carried over 99,000 passengers, a record of safety in which the country might take legitimate pride.

The type of machine involved had been in constant use for six years and this is the first accident in the course of over 2,000,000 miles flown by this type on regular services.

THE INVESTIGATION.

Under approved international procedure, the responsibility for the investigation rested with the country in which the accident occurred, though it was customary to associate with the enquiry, the technical representatives of the country to which the aircraft belonged.

No doubt in the present case the responsible Belgian authorities would work in the closest and most cordial co-operation with British experts. He conveyed to the relatives of those killed, the profound sympathy of the Secretary of State and himself at the loss so tragically sustained.—British Wireless.

DISASTROUS FIRE AT YAUMATI

Yaumati was the scene, early this morning, of a disastrous fire which broke out in a Chinese restaurant occupying three buildings, Nos. 320-324, Shanghai Street.

The outbreak was sudden and assumed large dimensions within a few minutes. No-one appears to have noticed it until all the three buildings were well alight. Li Wah, a baker, was one of those roused by shouts. He quickly got into the street, from where he could see, even at that early stage, all the upper floors of the four-storeyed buildings already in flames.

A district call brought all available fire appliances on the mainland to a difficult task. All the upper floors, which included the first, second, and third floors of Nos. 322, 323, and 324, were burnt out by the time control was secured.

The ground floors were left comparatively untouched. At the moment it is not known if any casualties occurred. Details regarding insurance that may have been carried by the Ping Heung, the restaurant affected, are also unavailable.

The quick extension of the fire was due to a draft induced by the open character of the interior of the three buildings, all of the upper floors of which were given over to the business of a tea-house and re-adapted to the purpose.

A multitude of jets were directed on the buildings from a side street, a back lane, and from adjoining buildings, and these had the desired effect after an hour and a half's strenuous play. The last stream was turned off at 2.40 a.m.

No casualties occurred, but all the nine upper storeys were burnt out.

Goods in the two shops on either side of the central staircases of the tea-house were damaged by water.

The cause of the fire is unknown, but it is believed to have originated in the kitchen on the second floor of the tea-house.

MAMAK SEASON TO BE EXTENDED

WILL NOW
CLOSE
APRIL 10INCOS CHAMPIONSHIP HOPES BRIGHTENWHY ACTION WAS NECESSARY

SAD LACK OF GROUNDS

[By "Bully-Off"]

THE Mamak tournament
will be continued for
another week and will now
close on April 10th instead
of March 21st, to enable Clubs to complete their fixtures.This move was primarily necessitated by the postponement of
two or three of the Incogno-
games recently on account of inclement weather and it will thus
enable them to qualify for the championship honours. Throughout the season the Incogs have
been handicapped by having no
ground of their own and have
had to arrange their matches for
days when the grounds of other Clubs were available.Another reason for prolonging the tournament is the fact that during the season many of the Naval teams have been out of
port on manoeuvres resulting in
a cancellation of matches all
round. They also have been hampered in regard to grounds.
Their home pitch, when the consent of the Naval Officers is obtained, is the Naval ground at King's Park, and with six naval
teams entered there has been a
great demand for the use of that field.The decision of the Mamak
committee will, I think, meet with general approval and give the Incogs a sporting chance of lowering the colours of the Radio, present champions and holders of the
first position in the league at the present time.SMART DISPLAY
BY SAINTSMAMAK DEFEAT FOR
H.K.S.R.A.Contrary to expectations, the St.
Andrew's hockey team defeated the
1st H.K.S.R.A. on the Marina ground yesterday three goals to nil. The victory was meritorious in view of
the Saints playing a man short throughout, A. Hamson failing to turn up.The H.K.S.R.A. were a formidable
team, and at one time were favourites
for the championship. On yesterday's form, however, they deserved to lose.
Only in the first half did they prove dangerous, but after being down by
two goals in the first half, they allowed their play to deteriorate, and
consequently the Saints had matters
practically their own way.The first goal was netted for the Saints by E. F. Fincher, and before the half time whistle sounded, Bliss,
the Interport footballer, netted a brilliant goal. The military team were well held in check by the Saints defenders, who gave an excellent display.The second half was decidedly in favour of the Saints, who were continually pressing. E. F. Fincher added the third goal towards the end.The match between the Hongkong Hockey Club seniors and the
H.K.S.R.A. scheduled to be played on the Marina ground, was postponed, as
the military side were playing St.
Andrew's.

TENNIS TOURNAMENTS.

Entries close on Friday, April 14, for the annual tennis tournaments of the Club. Last year the organising committee concluded the tournament in less than three weeks, and although it is their intention this year to complete each round as soon as possible, it is not proposed to rush the tournament through in the same time.As in former years the main event will be the singles championship of the Club, while a Junior Championship is also being held and will be open to all those players who fail to reach the semi-final stage of the Senior Championship with the exception of the Junior Champion for 1932 and the four semi-finalists of the 1932 Senior Championship.The full list of events is as follows:
Senior Singles Championship, Junior Singles Championship, Ladies Handicap "A" and "B," Ladies' Singles Championship, Ladies' Singles Handicap, Men's Doubles Handicap and Mixed Doubles Handicap.A mixed bridge drive is being organised for Saturday April 16 at 9 p.m. Each pair will play four deals against every other pair.

SPEED DANGER

"GET ON WITH IT"

CONTROL NEEDED

(By "Saracen")

Since the off-side law was altered
the pace of football has been very definitely quickened, but it is very doubtful whether this has been to the benefit of the game.I am convinced in the first place
that there is a limit to the speed
with which men may play properly
and successfully. To trap and get a ball under control takes time no matter how expert the touch of a player
may be and unless he is clever at
this he cannot do his work effectively.
Unfortunately, in the hurry and bustle of the modern game players are
so eager to "get on with it" that they
do not allow themselves a fair chance
to control the ball and this is one reason why it is so much in the air.The place for the ball is on the ground and while it is rising evenly to the aim of every player should be to keep it there. This is true even of the stopper in the centre who plays
without risk. It is, of course, often essential that a back should run on
to the ball and volley it when he is
threatened by advancing opponents.
On the other hand he has often time
to bring it down and push it forward
accurately to one of his half backs.
This is obviously a paying move
though it is seldom carried out, for
to give the ball in this way to a colleague means that the side remain
in possession to start an attack.
When a long uncontrolled clearing kick is made it is odds on the ball
going to a member of the opposition.

THE GOLDEN RULE.

"Get the ball down." That is a golden rule which should be observed
on every possible occasion. It seems to be thought, however, that in doing
this the game is slowed down. But some of the fastest football I have ever seen has been by men who seemed simply to be ambling along. They had the ball on the ground and they glided it to each other without, as the professional says, the opposition getting a kick at it.It is mainly the half backs who are responsible for the ball being so much in the air. This is especially true of the stopper in the centre who plays
as much with his head as with his feet. But many wing halves are
similarly inclined in their impetuosity
to run forward and use their heads,
whereas it would be much better if
they would move back and so get the ball down.An outside forward should possess speed because it is up to him to make ground quickly, but if you look at the
best teams I think it will be found that the best inside are the slowest.
And they are the best simply because
they take the time which, as I have
said, is necessary to get the ball under control. Copyright: N.F.L.P.I. TENNIS

CONTRACT BRIDGE

By W. E. McKenney

Charles Gordon of Toronto, Canada, asks me if contract players ever employed the play known as the Bath coup. This is a play that was popular amongst whist players and received its name from the Bath club of London.

This play could very seldom be used in contract, due to the fact that the opening leader would not continue with his suit unless receiving a come-on card from partner. However, I recall the following interesting hand which employed this particular play.

The Bidding

The bidding on the hand should be as follows: South should open with one heart. North, the partner, is justified in raising the contract to two hearts. He does not have any ruffing possibilities, although he does have four trump; however, he holds an ace and a queen in addition to the four trump.

This is all the information that South should need in order to bid four hearts.

The Play

West's best opening lead is the king of spades, in order to show the queen. However, it is not wise to open with the king when holding only the queen backed with either the jack or the ten.

We find South with a Bath coup situation, that is, the opening lead as a king and he holds the ace, jack and a small card.

If he plays the small spade and can coax West to continue with spades, you can see that he will now make two spade tricks, therefore the first trick should not be won, but the deuce should be played by South.

West can read that partner's seven is the lowest spade that he holds, therefore he is not asking his partner to continue with spades. West does not wish to lead away from his king of clubs and can see no harm in playing the diamond, therefore he leads the queen of diamonds.

Declarer wins this trick with the king and takes two rounds of hearts, which picks up the outstanding trump.

His next play is a small diamond, and if West carelessly plays it nine spot, the declarer goes right up with the ace in dummy and returns a small diamond which West is forced to win with the jack.

The declarer has lost a diamond and a spade and can lose only one more trick in order to make his contract. You can see that West is helpless.

He holds nothing but spades and clubs. If he leads a small club, the declarer will win with the queen in dummy and will then lose only the jack of spades. If West leads the spade, the Bath

Wrongful Repudiation.
Q—(a) Did the letters of the 17th February, 1930, the 6th March, 1930, the 19th March, 1930 and 8th April, 1930 or any and which of them constitute the wrongful termination or repudiation of the amended contract by S. Latif Hussain? (b) Is the letter written without prejudice dated 18th May, 1930, admissible as evidence?

A—Part a: These letters did not constitute a termination but they do, each and all of them, constitute repudiation. Such repudiation was wrongful. Part b: Admitted by agreement of parties.

Q—If the answer to 7 (a) above is in the affirmative is S. Latif Hussain liable in damages to Hang Shun and Company for breach of the amended contract?

A—Following from the above answer the repudiation was accepted by the purchasers on the 9th July 1930 by their consent to arbitration proceedings. Consequently the seller is liable in damages for breach of contract.

Q—If the answer to 8 above is in the affirmative is the measure of damages the difference between the contract price and the market price on the 8th April, 1930 and the amount of coal undelivered, namely 35,145 tons, if not, on what principles should the damages be assessed?

A—The measure of damages is the difference between two prices, calculated as from 17th February 1930 for future deliveries required by the contract. Prices of coal complying in detail with description in contract are alone relevant.

Q—By the letter of March 25, 1930, did Hang Shun and Company agree to give up their rights under the amended contract or to claim damages for the breach of the said contract and was there any consideration to support such agreement?

A—No.
Q—Is evidence admissible to explain the circumstances under which the letter of March 25, 1930, was written and the meaning thereof, and coup play can be completed and the declarer will win two spade tricks and lose only a club.

While the Bath coup play may not actually produce the extra trick in this hand, it does force West to make another lead, which gives the declarer an opportunity to gain additional information on the hand and eventually to make his contract.

A DRAMA OF PRISON CHAIN GANGS THAT WILL AMAZE YOU!

The clank of leg irons—the swish of the snake whip—the crack of rifle shots aimed at men with targets on their backs!

CAN THIS BE AMERICA?

Shameless, brutal and TRUE is the story of the chain gangs, where nameless men hack at mountains in the blistering sun.

Thrilling and glorious the story of the one man in the gang whose spirit would not crumble... who, race in mighty strength because a woman waited!

Here's drama big as life itself... drama to send the blood pounding through your veins and set aflame your deepest emotions.

DUCK CRUELTY CASE

DEAF COOK FINED TEN DOLLARS

Within three quarters of an hour of his arrest in Connaught Road West for cruelty to four wild ducks, a deaf Chinese cook of Cochrane Street was fined $10, or ten days, by Mr. Sihofield in the Central Police Court this morning.

Detective-Sergeant Kinnear said the ducks were put in a small basket. Their legs were tied together and the wings were intertwined, causing some to bleed. It was a difficult job to disentangle the birds.

A duck was taken from the basket and its injured wings were examined by the Magistrate.

His Worship:—What ball is the defendant on?

Sergt. Kinnear:—He did not go on bail. He was brought straight into Court.

INDIA REFORM SCHEME

COMMONS ACCEPT PROPOSAL

WINSTON OFF AGAIN

London, Mar. 29.

The House of Commons agreed to the Government's motion to appoint a Joint Select Committee of the Houses of Lords and Commons to examine the Government's proposals to reform the Government of India, by 449 votes to 43.

A Labour Opposition amendment, demanding, inter alia, Dominion Status for India, was rejected by 475 votes to 42.

The chief feature of to-night's session of the Indian debate in the Commons was a vigorous speech in which Mr. Winston Churchill assailed the Government's reform proposals.

Lord Winterton followed with a severe criticism of Mr. Churchill's attitude.—Reuter and British Wireless poisonous material discharged from an aeroplane.

The Colonial Secretary says it is too early to predict whether progress of the experiments will permit of practical measures in East Africa during 1933.—British Wireless

MACAO BROKER'S CASE

FURTHER REMAND GRANTED

Kwong Hung-ki, a young Macao broker, made another formal appearance before Mr. Wynne-Jones in the Central Police Court this morning in connexion with the charges of theft by bailee of a motor car belonging to Ng Chuk-wah, a building contractor, and with obtaining $1,000 by means of an alleged forged cheque at the American Express Company.

At last week's hearing, Mr. J. B. Prentis, for the prosecution, mentioned the possibility of charges of a graver nature arising out of an inquest to be heard by Mr. Schofield this afternoon, into the death of a Chinese school teacher in an accident in Jubilee Road, when a girl was injured. Defendant is the alleged driver of the car.

Mr. Wynne-Jones:—I understand from my brother that it is unlikely that his enquiry will be completed to-morrow, as the girl in the case is still in hospital. In any case we will only have the two present charges to go on with, and, that being so, I would probably reserve my decision pending the result of the enquiry.

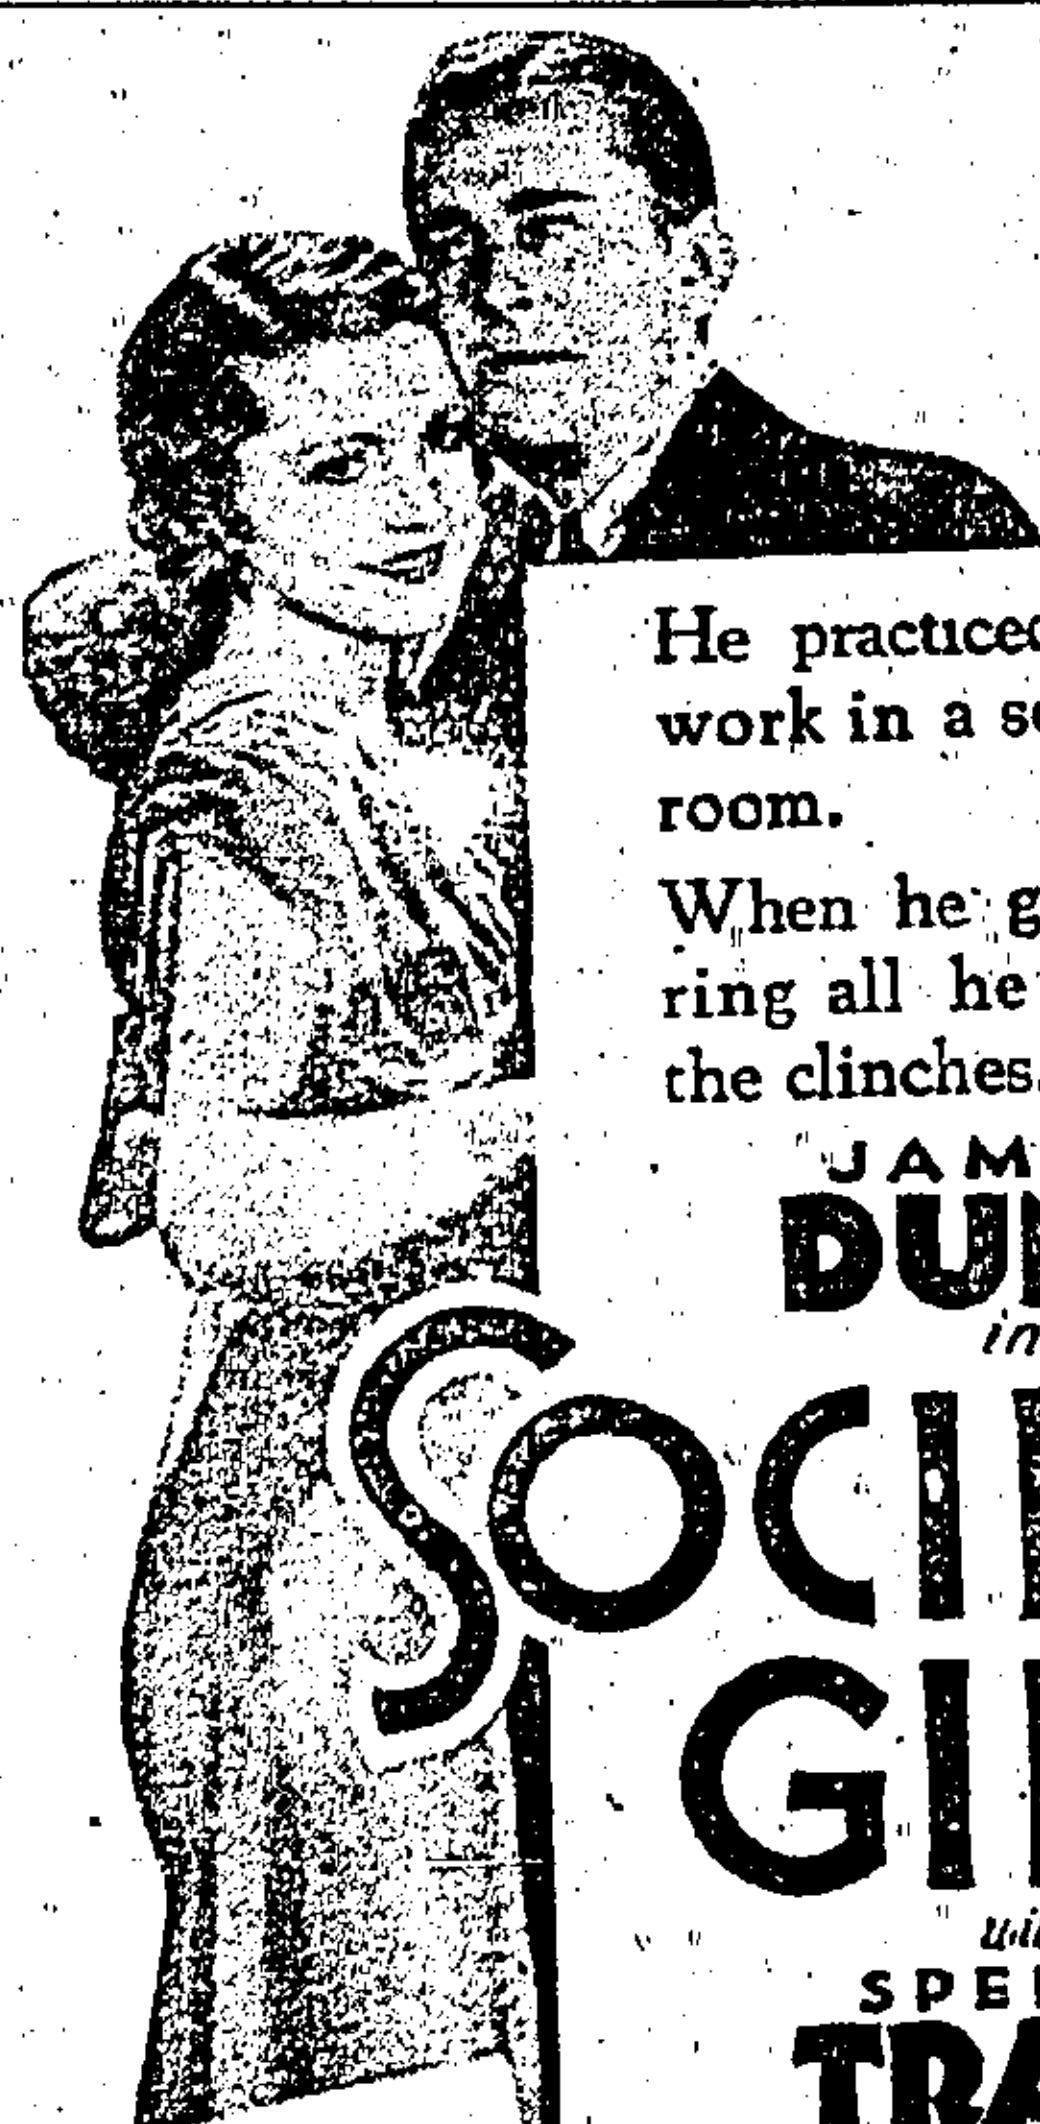

Mr. Hin-shing Lo, for the defence, agreed that that would be the best course.

His Worship remanded accused until Monday at 2.30 p.m.
